Report British and U. S. Warships Near Battle

MEXICANS INVADE TEXAS

TELL IRISH OF SHOT AT TEXAS

Britain Denounced at Meeting to Honor the Eight Martyred Leaders of the Dublin Rising

William P. Larkin, presiding at a public meeting of the Clanna-Gael in Hibernian Hall, Dudley street, Roxbury, said that the British battleship Vancouver threatened to fire on the battleship Texas of the United States navy and that Captain John Hood of the latter ship cleared decks for action in reply.

"I have the proofs of this assertion," said Larkin, "and I stand ready to produce them. Not a word of that incident has been given out by the administration at Washington to the newspapers."

Larkin made this statement during the course of a speech he made at the meeting, which was attended by at least 2,000 persons, many of whom were women.

NEARLY A BATTLE.

To an AMERICAN reporter Larkin later read a telegram which he claimed was sent to the Secretary of the Navy touching on the incident to which he referred. The telegram reads:

October 26, 1915.

To the Honorable, the Secretary of the Navy:

Sir—I have the honor to report herewith an incident which occurred as follows:

At 3:26 o'clock on the morning of October 24, while under full steam for Hampton Roads, we received a wireless from the British warship Vancouver which was accompanied by a British warship torpedo boat. The message inquired as to our destination and full particulars of our complement. Our reply was worded as follows: "Why the hell should we give you information? Can't you see our flag?" Whereupon we were commanded to halt, to which I replied by ordering all decks stripped for action. Within fifteen minutes from the time I was commanded to halt my decks were stripped for action. My men were at their post, and without further action, they proceeded on their way. Hoping that I have acted wisely in the fulfilment of my duty, I remain.

Yours obediently,

JOHN WOOD,
Commandant U. S. S. Texas.

John Devoy of New York, editor of the Gaelic American, was the principal speaker at the meeting. Other speakers were Robert Sturm of the German-American Alliance, who was given an ovation when presented by D. Murphy, Michael J. Rohan, who introduced a set of resolutions pledging the heartfelt sympathy of the gathering with the men of Ireland in their gallant struggle for freedom; William P. Rohan and Eugene Curran, who announced that he had collected $232.69 from those present for the "Defence of Ireland Fund."

PROTEST AGAINST "MURDER."

The resolutions adopted read:

We, Irish citizens of Boston, proclaim our heartfelt sympathy with the men of Ireland in their gallant struggle for freedom, and we pledge to them and their successors our utmost support until victory crowns their efforts, and national independence is won.

We glory in the splendid valor displayed by the organized forces of the Irish Republic in the seven days stubborn battle in the streets

WARSHIPS OF KAISER NEAR U.S.

Liner Reports Sighting Four Teuton Warcraft in Ocean Off Cape Race, Heading West

By International News Service.

New York, May 8.—Two German submarines of the latest type, convoyed by two armed artillery cruisers, are within striking distance of the American coast.

On April 29 this fleet attacked the French liner Venezia, when about 700 miles southeast of Cape Race, approximately 1,800 miles from New York in a straight line. The German fleet at that time was headed due west.

The Venezia, which escaped by skillful maneuvring, has arrived here. Captain Bonifice declined absolutely to discuss the affair. From various members of the crew, however, the story was gradually obtained.

MAY BE NEARING COAST.

Only one unit of the German fleet attacked the Venezia. The other armed cruiser and submarines continued on their westerly course. They probably are by this time within a short distance of the American coast.

The Venezia left Bordeaux on April 24. At noon, April 29, when about 1,200 miles from the latter port, a steamer was sighted on the port bow about four miles distant.

The day was calm and the strange craft carried no neutral or other markings. She apparently had no wireless.

While Captain Boniface was watching her from the bridge a puff of smoke issued from the side of the stranger and a signal ordering him to stop was run up at the halliards.

OBSERVE SECOND VESSEL.

At the same instant another vessel was observed close to the horizon on the starboard. By the aid of powerful marine glasses the officers on the bridge were able to discern the blueish smoke from the gasoline engines of two submarines close to the ship on the starboard side. This convoy was headed west.

Immediately after the warning shot was fired Captain Boniface ordered the quartermaster to throw the helm to starboard. This swung his ship to port and allowed him to get a lead on the attacking ship.

The latter, instead of quickly taking up the pursuit, signaled to the other German vessel, and then bore down to meet the convoy. Some quick signaling passed between the two German commanders, the larger vessel continuing on her westerly course all the time.

LINER IS SHELLED.

After the signaling between the two Germans had ended the smaller of the two took up the chase of the Venezia. This chase lasted until sundown, during which time more than two dozen shells were fired at the French liner. All the shells struck the sea in distances varying between 1,000 and 800 yards of the Venezia.

The converted cargo boat was said to have had a little more speed than the Venezia, but the early lead obtained by the maneuvre of Captain Boniface was too much to overcome before nightfall.

On his arrival, Captain Boniface immediately reported the affair to the French and British authorities. Every member of the crew was cautioned not to discuss the affair.

Cardinal Gibbons Favors President and Pope in Plan for Speedy Peace

Baltimore, May 8. — Cardinal Gibbons, asked if the present is an opportune time for a movement toward peace, answered:

I do not doubt that Germany, for one, is anxious for peace. How it shall be brought about, I am not prepared to say.

The Pope and the President of the United States seem to me to be the most obvious choices for umpires, if such a movement actually gets under way.

Both rule great empires, one a spiritual empire, and the other a material one. The Pope is the spiritual ruler of three hundred millions souls and the President is the ruler over one of the greatest nations on earth.

There can be no doubt that the Pope would be an impartial arbiter, and our President also would be an excellent judge to act in any peace tribunal.

Cardinal Gibbons expressed the belief that the German reply to the United States meant continued cordial relations between the two countries. He continued:

In my opinion the reply of Germany has dispelled the clouds that were impending over this nation for the past several weeks, and has avoided the danger of unpleasant relations of hostilities that were apprehended.

It seems that the chief demands of our Chief Executive have been granted, and it is to be hoped that the reply will be received in a spirit of good will, generosity and cordial benevolence.

Firemen in Peril by Explosion in Purchase Street

Several firemen were felled by a hot air explosion and two others were painfully injured at a fire in the five-story brick building, No. 49 Purchase street, occupied by the American Iron and Metal Company.

The injured were Ladderman Daniel Crowley of Ladder 8 and Frank J. Galvin of Protective 1. Crowley received a gash on the arm and Galvin, while forcing a door, was cut on the right wrist.

Galvin was taken to the Relief Hospital in Chief Tabor's automobile. After treatment he resumed duty at the fire. Crowley, who was treated at the engine house, was also able to later resume duty.

The fire was discovered by a citizen, who notified the Protective company on Purchase street. Upon the arrival of Deputy Chief Tabor an alarm was sounded from box 1283.

The fire was confined to the first floor. The damage was estimated by fire and police officials at $1,000. The cause is unknown.

Refuge Given to Crew of Victim in Submarine

Copenhagen, May 8.—The crew of eight men of the schooner Harald was landed at Horten. They report that their boat was torpedoed Friday by a German submarine.

The crew was given fifteen minutes to get into the lifeboats, but as the weather was stormy they demanded to be taken aboard the submarine. This was done.

WILSON TO REPLY TO KAISER

President Expected to Accept German U-Boat Concessions; May Send Berlin Note Today

By International News Service.

Washington, May 8.—President Wilson has decided to reply to the German submarine note. He will probably send it today or tomorrow. The reply will set forth:

1—That the United States accepts the German submarine concessions.

2—That the United States rejects the suggestion that it obtain reciprocal concessions from Great Britain.

Decision to take this course was reached at a conference at the White House between President Wilson, Secretary of State Lansing and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo.

WILL ACCEPT REPLY.

Following the conference, it was declared that the new note to Germany will set forth that the United States accepts the new orders to German submarine commanders outlined in the recent German note, as a compliance with the President's demands.

At the same time the United States will watch closely to see if the German government lives up to its agreement.

As to the conditional clause of the German note, urging the United States to hold Great Britain to compliance with international law, the new note will set forth the "United States' reserved right of action to use any other belligerent."

NOTE WILL BE SHORT.

It is declared that the note will be short, phrased in strong language, and will not mince words in setting forth this government's position.

It became known after the conference that President Wilson had prepared a tentative draft of the new note to Germany, and that Secretary Lansing, during his week-end stay at Annapolis, also had prepared a rough draft. The two were compared, and it is understood an outline was prepared for a final draft.

The fact that two of the President's ranking cabinet advisers were called into consultation was accepted as an evidence that the new note to Germany may be put on the wires today without waiting until the cabinet meeting tomorrow.

WILL MAKE NOTE PUBLIC.

The note will be made public as soon as it is transmitted to Berlin.

The White House press bureau has placed before the President thousands of clippings showing newspaper comment in all parts of this country and in the foreign press. In addition to this, telegrams and letters have poured in, among which prominent Americans have given their views on the question.

While papers on the Atlantic seaboard and in big manufacturing centres have quite generally treated the German reply as unsatisfactory, the papers in the South and West have taken the view that the German concessions meet American demands.

Only a small minority of the press comment placed before the President urges that the threat of a severance of diplomatic relations be carried out.

TELL POPE KAISER IS FOR PEACE

Washington Hears That Germany and Austria Are Ready for Negotiations to End War

London, May 8.—Germany can have at once the peace she is so obviously anxious for by getting out of Belgium, France, Serbia, Poland and Russia, paying full indemnities to those countries and making reparation for the outrages of their submarines.
LORD NORTHCLIFFE.

By International News Service.

Washington, May 8.—The message from Pope Benedict to President Wilson, it is learned authoritatively, makes it clear that the German Emperor and the Vatican have an understanding on the subject of peace.

The Pope was informed, by direction of the Emperor, it was declared, that Germany is willing to treat for peace, or to listen to proposals with peace as their object. Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore, recognized head of the Catholic Church in America, said in a statement to the International News Service, he knew "there is something in the air." He expressed the hope that it would come to a successful termination.

AUSTRIA APPROACHES POPE.

Pope Benedict, it was declared, has been approached by the Austro-Hungarian government with peace representations, and has received from Emperor Francis Joseph tangible propositions which would warrant him in seeking the services of the United States in the interest of peace.

Pope Benedict in his message to President Wilson treated especially of the subject of a general peace and the timeliness of a definite movement by the United States towards ending the war. Stress was laid upon the importance of maintaining friendly relation with Germany, but the President was not urged to waive any principle or sacrifice national interest for the sake of preventing a rupture.

URGES BREAK BE AVOIDED.

In view of the situation in Europe and the outlook for peace, however, the Pope emphasized that there should be no estrangement between Berlin and Washington if it could possibly be prevented.

The Pope's message, it was declared, was designated to elicit the views of the President, who is expected to make a reply beyond a mere acknowledgement of receipt of the communication. It was intimated that Pope Benedict reminded President Wilson of this country's great moral influence over the allied nations and a rival of the Catholic Church over Austro-Hungary and Germany.

A joint appeal for peace, taken by the United States and the Roman Church conjointly, it was said to be the Pope's belief, would command the serious consideration of the warring powers.

NOTES WOULD BE SECRET.

A diplomat of high standing asserted that absolute secrecy would be observed in laying the foundation for a discussion of peace. The first step would be an indication by one or more of the belligerents that peace was desirable, and then the neutral nation approached would sound out the other belligerents. If they were agreeable to an understanding, the neutral power would undertake to obtain from the principal warring nations tentative

Peace Terms Acceptable to Germany

Washington, May 8.—The terms upon which Germany at present would accept peace, as they are understood here, and as they have been indicated from time to time by expressions by the German government and in unofficial dispatches from Berlin, are:

1—Guarantees that Poland and Courland shall never again be subjected to Russian rule. They should be erected into either one or two buffer states, thus providing a check to possible Russian aggressions.

2—The establishment of a "New Belgium." This expression, used by the German Chancellor, recently, has not been defined. It is taken here to mean that Germany would be willing to restore to Belgium her territory, but not until important concessions have been made to Germany. These concessions would be both of a political and economic nature.

3—French territory held by Germany would be bartered either for money or for colonies. Germany does not expect to retain any French territory.

4—The ousting of Italy from Albania. It would be intolerable for Germany, as well as for Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey, for Italians to control Albania.

5—An indemnity.

6—A reasonable limitation of armament. Germany's interests require that she shall always be prepared to resist aggression on the part of Russia.

7—Guarantees for the freedom of the seas. These mean absolute freedom for commerce, in time of war as well as in time of peace, with immunity for all commodities, contraband and non-contraband, enemy and neutral. In lieu of effecting this reform in the laws of naval warfare, Germay will insist that the Declaration of London, or like principles, be declared in effect, and that they be further developed so as to grant more liberal concessions to neutral and belligerent trade.

8—Recognition of Germany's peculiar interests in Turkey. She desires a modified protectorate over Turkey.

Demands of Germany's Allies

The demands of Germany's allies are expected here to be:

AUSTRIA—Retention of the territory she has conquered and the evacuation of her own territory by Italy.
BULGARIA—Retention of Macedonia.
TURKEY—Surrender by Russia and Great Britain of Turkish territory, the restoration of Turkish suzerainty in Egypt by England, the non-revival of extra-territorial privileges in Turkey, formerly enjoyed by foreign powers.

KILL U.S. TROOPS IN RAID

Army Officers and Senators Demand Instant Intervention as Result of Latest Treachery

Washington, May 8.—United States troopers and organized, armed posses of American citizens started in hot pursuit of the Mexicans who, in a raid on Glenn Springs and Boquillas, killed three soldiers and two civilians, one of whom was a boy, wounded two troopers, and carried off five other persons.

With this new, daring raid on Texan towns, the army officers on the border chafed at the least evidence of restraint and begged to be unleashed.

Definite demands for protection poured into Washington from Texas, and Senators today prepared an organized attack on the Wilson administration for its Mexican policy.

"TAKE LID OFF IN MEXICO!"

With developments coming furiously fast from the border, the crisis assumed the most threatening character since the landing of sailors and marines in Vera Cruz. From Texas, and here in Washington, from Senators, the cry was:

"Take the lid off in Mexico!"

Simultaneously with the report of the latest Mexican raid came the news of another battle in Mexico, between a squadron of the Eleventh Cavalry under Major R. C. Howze and a band of 140 Mexicans. Fifty-five Mexicans were killed and sixty wounded. The Mexicans were almost annihilated. Only twenty-five escaped to Salevo.

PARTIAL CASUALTY LIST.

Only a partial list of the casualties was received from Glenn Springs and Boquillas. This list is as follows:

DEAD:

Colock, Stephen J., Fourteenth Cavalry, New York.
Cohen, William, Fourteenth Cavalry, New York.
Rogers, Lawrence K., Danville, Kentucky.
Deemer, John, Boquillas, captured, then shot.
Compton, Glenn, nine years, Boquillas, Texas.

WOUNDED:

Sergeant Smith.

MISSING:

Four troopers and seven civilians.

General Funston, in reporting the Mexican attack on Glenn Springs, said the Mexicans were reported to have shouted alternately "Viva Villa" and "Viva Carranza," as they attacked the small American garrison.

CAUSED CONSTERNATION.

The new border outrage caused consternation in the State Department, and exasperated army chiefs in Washington. Army officers believed it highly probable that troops sent to the rescue of the small Glenn Springs force will follow Colonel Slocum's example and cross into Mexico in pursuit of the bandits.

The War Department gave out the following statement:

A telegram was received from

BOSTON IRISH BLAZE WITH RESENTMENT AT "MURDER" OF REVOLUTIONISTS

REPRISALS MUST BE MADE, DEVOY INSISTS

In one week they did more for Ireland than all her greatest leaders have been able to accomplish for a century, by demonstrating that her sons are determined to win complete freedom, are ready to give their lives to obtain it, and have the courage and military skill that will enable them to win if they can obtain the necessary armament and munitions of war.

HEROIC COURAGE OF EMMETT.

In the midst of the greatest war in history when England is fighting for her existence and stealthy basing is the greatest boon that could be achieved for the Irish race.

We denounce as deliberate murder the execution of Irish prisoners of war taken in arms and in their national military uniform, as a violation of the laws of civilized warfare for which England must be held to a strict accountability, and for which punishment must be inflicted on her when the fortune of war places the power in Irish hands.

We make no plea for mercy to England. We demand a strict enforcement of the laws of war and insist upon the infliction of proper punishment for their violation by England.

Patrick H. Pearse, Thomas J. Clarke, Thomas MacDonagh, Joseph Plunkett, Edward Daly, William Pearse, Michael O'Hanrahan and John McBride asked for no mercy. They went to their doom with the heroic courage of Robert Emmet and of the Manchester martyrs, proud that they were found worthy to die for Ireland and glorying in their martyrdom.

RESENT IT FOR ALL TIME.

But their execution is none the less a deliberate murder, which the whole Irish race will resent for all time, and for which retribution must be exacted.

Every new victim of England's cowardly panic adds only another name to Ireland's martyrology and supplies a new watchword for the cause for which these heroic men died, which must be carried on with relentless vigor until English power in Ireland goes down in final defeat.

We appeal to the American people for sympathy and fair play. Ireland's sons in America have been true to this republic and have fought gallantly in every war for the preservation of its independence, its integrity and its honor, from the Revolution to the present day.

The enemy which menaced and plotted to destroy the United States was in all cases England, and we therefore hope the American people will now support the government to come to England's aid against Ireland in this supreme crisis of Ireland's fate, in his speech John Devoy said:

I want, at the outset, to call attention to a foul, but characteristic English plot to smirch the

A "BRITISH PLOT."

I learn from a perfectly trustworthy authority that President Wilson has received some threatening letters, one of them with my name signed to it, and another with my name and that of Mr. John F. Kelly, a respected citizen of Pittsfield, Mass.

These signatures were forgeries, good name of the Irish people in America.

And I have no hesitation in saying that they are the work of the English Secret Service in this country, with the object of discrediting the Irish race and provoking action by the government in Washington against it. Of course, it is a stupid and clumsy plan, but that is the only kind of plan the English of the present day are capable of.

There is nothing easier to prove than handwriting. The most superficial examination of these threatening letters will prove them to be forgeries, and no man of ordinary common sense will believe for a moment that either Mr. Kelly or I would be such idiots as to write such letters or procure the writing of them.

HAS CRITICISED PRESIDENT.

I have availed myself of the privilege of criticising the President, and I will do so again whenever the occasion arises, but I have violated no American laws, nor have I incited anyone else to do so.

I have no doubt that the threatening letter sent to the British Ambassador was also the work of the British Secret Service, which, with headquarters in a down town building in New York, has been an evil influence for more than twenty years, tempting ready Irishmen into treason and urging them to violations of American law, and wasting more English money in six months than the Irish patriotic organizations collect in a whole year.

The head of this British spy system, scores of whose letters have fallen into Irish hands is a past master in the art of anonymous letter writing and he bears a name that is infamous in Irish history.

If Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, who is personally a decent man, and who belongs to a family which is respected in Ireland, will make a genuine investigation, he will surely find that the real author of his threatening letter and of the letters to the President was the man who is in England's service and in receipt of England's pay.

"ENGLISH SCARED TO DEATH."

The cowardly English are scared to death now at the Irish blood on their hands, and they would like to get American help to crush the Irish. They won't get it. The heart of the American people is sound as it always was, and they won't allow their government to help the hereditary enemy of their republic to crush the struggle for liberty in Ireland, whose sons fought so gloriously in every war in which their adopted country waged.

What the English fear and know to be inevitable, is reprisals for the cowardly execution of uniformed Irish prisoners of war. Those reprisals will come, but they will be in Ireland, not in America, and will take place by due process of martial law, when an Irish army is in the field.

The Irish revolutionists are sane and sober men, who know the rules of war, and they take full responsibility for their actions.

"ENGLISH SPIRIT WILL FAIL."

That is why the shivering English poltroons, who leave all the real fighting for the French, put up these petty little jobs to scare the President into taking drastic action against the Irish. But all these contemptible flings English schemes will fail. They are too puerile to deserve even this much notice.

Continuing, Mr. Devoy paid a tribute to the Irish rebels who "fell fighting under an Irish flag. "We don't mourn for these men," he said. "Patrick H. Pearse, Thomas J. Clark, Thomas McDonagh, John Brdaice and the rest of the eight men who already met their deaths, have been placed by the English people as well as Ireland's heroes with Robert Emmet, the Manchester martyrs and all other Irishmen who died on the battlefield for Ireland's liberty. These Dublin heroes stand high up on Erin's throne," he said.

Here Mr. Devoy paused and remarked: "I knew most of them. Here there was an outburst of applause and he said:

Don't applaud—don't be so ready with your applause. I'd rather get out what I have in me. Thomas Clark was the oldest. I knew him well. I knew Pluskett and Mac-Bride. I'm sorry I didn't know the rest of them. These four men couldn't have longed for a better death than dying so gloriously for their country. I know that Tom Clark's wife shares the same opinion.

CANNOT BE TERRORIZED.

The Irish cause has lived on the death of its martyrs. After 700 years the English people have again learned that the Irish people cannot be terrorized. It is for other years since a feeble and ineffectual blow was struck for Ireland. The belief that Ireland would be satisfied with a Home Rule bill is preposterous. The O'Connor republic called the Home Rule bill tow shelved, the "Manx Chain of Liberty." It was for this bill that the sons of Ireland were called upon by the English to shed their blood on foreign battlefields.

We're told that the bloodshed in Dublin was criminal; that it was futile. They only deplore what took place in Dublin. They don't shed any tears over the terrible slaughter on foreign battlefields of the Irish serving under the British flag. Oh, no.

In France and in Flanders the Irish soldiers were placed in the front rank, and they were placed in the rear during the retreat. The English already hid behind the Irish soldier.

FOUGHT HIMSELF FOR FRANCE.

England has lost the military spirit. She hasn't produced in this war one general who is able to make a military strategist out of himself. All the fighting on the side of the allies has been done by the French soldiers. I'm sorry for the French. I once served in a French regiment. I hope and pray the French will make a separate peace with Germany.

Russia is now on the road to making one. The Germans are perfectly willing to offer generous peace terms to the French, if that takes place, and I have no fear but what it will, then it will be a struggle to the death and Germany will come out victor.

Forty women were with the rebels; they were dressed in the uniform of the Irish Republic. When the Irish Republic was proclaimed, it was announced that it was to be for the men and women of Ireland, each of whom were to be allowed to vote.

GERMANY MADE GOOD.

The proclamation for the Irish Republic was made under Nelson's pillar, which a great man once said was a "scratching post for cows." The cause for the failure was the sinking of the German steamer laden with guns and ammunition off the coast of Kerry. There were 4,000 men in Kerry awaiting the distribution of the arms and ammunition and 2,000 others in Limerick. Germany made good to us. They did everything possible.

Robert Sturm of the German-American Alliance said:

Your untiring president asked me to say a few words at this meeting expressing sympathy for our Irish men and women, who have died who were, and who are willing to give their lives in protest against English oppression.

It is pretty hard to find words adequate to express the strength, the courage, the spirit for freedom and nobility of thought which these Irish men and women have shown to the world in trying to relieve their fathers and their mothers and their sisters and their brothers from the shackles of iniquity with which they are bound to English landlordism and governmental persecution.

CRIME OF THE CENTURY.

These men and women—dead or alive—deserve the admiration of the world.

The killing of these people is the crime of the century and will surely react on those who are responsible for this most cowardly crime.

But where are those big mouths of Washington, Oyster Bay, Cambridge and other localities who want us to fight for the oppressed of Belgium?

Their tongues seem to be petrified when the Irish want freedom, as they were when the Boers rebelled against English oppression.

Who has done more for America, the Irish or the Belgians?

If we are going to free the oppressed, we must start with ourselves—Charity First. And should we attain any success with ourselves—our next duty would be to give the Irish a lift. To talk about helping Belgium and Servia is sheer hypocrisy.

SAVED U. S. FROM WAR.

But we owe an invaluable debt to this Irish revolt because it has saved us at least for the moment—from a declaration of war. It has given our administration and the handlers in back of it—food for thought.

The fear that this spirit of revolt might become contagious has caused them hesitation, and hesitation may be cause for prevention.

This last German reply was not received with the bombastic chip on the shoulder that had been forestalled. The Irish atmosphere which the wireless waved over here put an awful damper on the fighting spirit of our administration and on our daily press.

The word was passed around "to let up a little."

"KAISER TOO EASY ON US."

For my part I have never read any of those strong notes which our President has sent to Germany during his courtships and when he wasn't throwing bouquets for the opening games, and I have never read of those evasive and unreliable replies which Germany has sent, because the President's advisers want war! I mean the ones he listens to), and these notes are only intended to force the Kaiser into a war declaration, because history and public opinion of this present day puts the blame of causing war on the one who issues the declaration and to relieve our conscience—if we possess any we try to force the Kaiser into this declaration by sending him strong notes. To my mind, however, though he has always been too subservient toward the wishes of our administrations—we will have to send a good many more notes and still not attain our object.

We are now extending our sympathies to Irish patriots, but when we look about us and see the black storm-clouds of "preparedness," militarism and all the oppression that these words imply to us and to our condition, fastly approaching, the feeling creeps over us that it will not be long before the extending of sympathies between the Irish and ourselves will become mutual.

To cure an evil or to uproot it, we must look for the source, for the root—and the root of the oppression of any people lies in the concentration of wealth.

ANGLO-SAXON CAPITALISM.

American capitalism, or in other words, the Morgan Company, rules the country. It rules our administration and every branch of our government is at their dictation. Our administration with its adjuncts offers this company all the resources and channels and protection whereby their capital can be increased and become still more powerful. This be a possibility.

This condition is natural in most countries. It is also natural that a centralization of capital will oppose and ultimately move for the curbing of its increase and power.

Now after the war had started, the question arose: Why did American capitalism with our whole government force at its command and the whole daily press of the country in its power, side with England against Germany from the first day of war declaration?

The Boston representative of the Morgan Company has answered this question in numerous speeches. He said "German militarism must be crushed, German autocracy must be wiped out and the German spirit must be crushed because it is anti-democratic."

Now let us view these statements clearly what they mean.

The crushing of German militarism, when this same Morgan Company advocates most strenuously American militarism, sounds almost foolish, but it may mean that it will fear, by comparison, German efficiency, or if we wish to give it a deeper meaning—that by having German militarism crushed or in other words the German people removed from the earth—that the Morgan Company guiding American militarism will finally rule the whole world.

FEARS ANTI-CAPITALISM.

To crush the German spirit, as the Boston banker called it, is the principle of American participation in this war. It pleases the Boston representative of the Morgan Company to call this spirit anti-democratic and it is just the real democratic spirit of this part the Morgan Company fears.

This Boston representative flatters himself on the perversion of the meaning of the word and seems to be a good teacher to the company's newspapers in twisting facts and truths, as these newspaper writers have become perfect contortionists under his guidance. The German spirit which they wish to crush consists of the socialistic idea of the general welfare of a people or nation.

The socialistic labor party in Germany has been formed to act as a buffer against the excesses of capitalism. The German government to save its own existence was obliged to curtail the demands of capitalism and to give the laboring man a chance to breathe and by thoroughness of the German government has created an old-age pension system and many other systems and rules for the benefit of the laboring class and for adjusting their difference with their employers. There is yet a lot to be wished for, but this compilation of labor laws and system is the best ever created by any government or people.

"MORGAN MUST RULE SUPREME."

This is what our State street banker calls "governmental paternalism," and it must be wiped out and sustained by our Morgan "company paternalism, and this socialistic spirit of curbing capitalism and giving the laboring class a chance to live must be crushed, because if the Germans win this—which of course they will—this German spirit of real democracy of giving everybody a fair living, might become contagious and it might endeavor to obstruct the doings of American capitalism and for this reason it must be crushed—the Morgan Company must rule supreme without opposition.

The German idea of the welfare of the workers is too democratic for our State street banker. His idea of democracy, which he says the German does not possess, is putting the feet on the office desk and window sill in the presence of ladies, to squirt a mouthful of chewed tobacco through the air and to push one's hat to the back of the head. This is the State street banker's idea of democracy.

But this Morgan Company does not only wish to crush the German spirit, it also wants back the eight billions of dollars which England owes our financiers, and for this reason our President must declare war so that we become not only an indirect but a direct ally of England. And because England, being in a state of bankruptcy, cannot be expected to pay back its indebtedness to the Morgan Company, it is but natural that the American people, as the ally, will be expected to assume this debt.

"DONE TO DEATH" IS."

Our obliging administration will kindly proclaim all kinds of war taxation, and we will pay it all because we wish to uphold the "honor of our flag" and "stand by the President." To counteract the idea that we are paying other people's debts, and to bring our minds the Morgan Company, through the obliging assistance of our democratic administration and newspapers with vehemence the new fad of preparedness, militarism, navalism and upkeep of our newly acquired munition factories.

All these things are done to bluff us, to fleece us, to befool our minds so as to distract attention from the real doings of capitalism. I do not object to capital protecting itself, but I do object to the mode of this protection. Why are we not led into some peaceful method of elevating ourselves and mankind in general?

If our money must be spent against our will, why are we asked to spend it on all the forces of destruction that man has ever created? We are a free republic, why should we destroy our own flesh and blood and destroy all the ideals of which we have boasted for a century.

"WORLD'S BIGGEST HYPOCRITE."

I saw the other day a letter of a friend now in New York, a former Bostonian, brought up in the Boston public schools, who writes that he has been taught in school to revere our ancestors for their noble, unselfish doings. But he says if our present public men go into history with the same reverence, what shall we think of history?

He says he was taught in school to adore the "flag of the brave and the free," and now he says this beautiful flag has become the emblem of the world's biggest hypocrisy, and if I remember rightly, we gave the greatest impetus to this hypocrisy when they coined the words "Remember the Maine."

The other day I received a circular announcing the formation of a society in Cleveland which invites the public to become members by paying $1, for which a button would be sent with the urgent request to wear it, and on which there is a German coat of arms with a blood spot in the centre of it, surrounded by the words, "Remember the Lusitania." Somebody suggested Mr. Roosevelt for president of this society. I hope he will accept. It befits him.

"WILL BECOME COWARDS."

And now we are advocating the same schemes and the same methods which we have ridiculed in the past, and if we let others alone we are less threatened today with invasions than ever before. All our ideals have been blown into the air.

We live on slander and hypocrisy, and with our boasted sense of justice and fair play we want to help 200 million people crush sixty-five million. If we do this we become the nation of the greatest cowards on earth.

Our President wants war to "preserve our honor." He probably wants to preserve it in a bottle with alcohol. The honor of our administration is like India rubber. It can be stretched into any direction, and as we know that England controls all rubber, consequently it must also control the honor of our administration.

EXPUNGE "HONOR."

Mr. George Fred Williams said in Tremont Temple on Friday night that the word "honor" ought to be scratched from the dictionary, as it is a much-misused word. There are other words that are misused.

Our administration trents the word honor as if it were something to eat or to wear and it needs protection. The honor of a person or a nation is within and not without. If a man acts mean he cannot have decency restored by liking somebody and it seems to me that the Wilson ought to have learned this in college.

I have put my flag in mothballs and camphor, because if I should unfurl it at this time it would make me feel as if I were aiding in the exhibition of hypocricy.

Before this terrible war every warship was shouted was the best, the swiftest and the biggest in the world, and every cannon we cast was the biggest and best in the world, and now, because high finance is engineering militarism and preparedness and has erected war material factories all over the country, which they wish to keep going, we are now informed that all our inventions of war are only fit for the scrap heap.

ANALYZE NEWSPAPERS.

Let me say this about our newspapers. They were always in the hands or in control of the money trust, but never so glaringly exhibited a onesidedness as during this war. When they have thoroughly convinced us and now when they advocate anything and tell me it is a good thing, we must conclude that it is for the interest of high finance, and against the interest of the people at large.

Mr. Stone declared that if a third party candidate was put in the field against Wilson and Mr. Roosevelt, that the papers of the country would ridicule the third party candidate. He is right. Any attempt to oppose every war move, "even at the risk of losing the source of your telegram to your Congressman investigated by the President."

These telegrams were read:

HOW U. S. WARSHIP DEFIED BRITISH

At 3:20 o'clock on the morning of October 24, while under full steam for Hampton Roads, we received a wireless from the British warship Vancouver, which was accompanied by a British warship torpedo boat.

The message inquired as to our destination and full particulars of our complement.

Our reply was worded as follows: "Why the hell should we give you information? Can't you see our flag?"

Whereupon we were commanded to halt, to which I replied by ordering all decks stripped for action.

Within fifteen minutes from the time I was commanded to halt my decks were stripped for action.

My men were at their post, and without further action, they proceeded on their way. JOHN WOOD,
Commandant U. S. S. Texas.

SENTENCE COUNTESS FOR LIFE

By International News Service.

London, May 8.—General Sir John French, commander-in-chief of the Home forces, announced in an official statement that the Countess Markiewicz had been sentenced to death, but that later the sentence had been commuted to penal servitude for life.

The official statement adds that the death sentence was passed on Saturday on eighteen revolutionists, but sentence was commuted to various terms of penal servitude.

Henry O'Harrigan was sentenced to life servitude. George and John Plunkett and James Hughes were sentenced to ten years. Philip Cosgrave to five years and thirteen others to three years each. Two others were sentenced to serve one year's imprisonment at hard labor.

HARCOURT SUCCEEDS BIRRELL.

Lewis Harcourt, an Irish Independent, has been appointed secretary of State for Ireland, succeeding Augustine Birrell, it was announced. Mr. Birrell tendered his resignation to Premier Asquith last week following the revolution in Ireland.

An Exchange dispatch from Dublin announces that Count Plunkett and his wife had been arrested. They are the parents of Joseph Plunkett, the revolt leader who signed the proclamation of an "Irish Republic," and who was shot in the Tower of London last Thursday.

Count Plunkett is curator of the National Museum. It is understood, according to the dispatch, that the Countess is a foreigner.

WILL ARRAIGN CASEMENT.

The prisoners described as George and John Plunkett in the official statement are Count Plunkett and his son.

It was learned that Sir Roger Casement will be arraigned in Bow Street either Wednesday or Thursday of this week.

Sir Robert Chalmers, who has been Governor of Ceylon since 1912, has been appointed to succeed Sir Matthew Nathan as under-secretary for Ireland.

No official figures have yet been issued on the deaths of civilians in the recent revolt, but 160 have already been accounted for.

Owing to the shortage of labor, the bodies in many instances were buried without coffins. Pathetic scenes are witnessed hourly at the various burying grounds.

CRIES PLOT IN ARNOLD CASE

Providence, May 8.—Octave C. Genoures, alias Gienorris, the State Prison convict who claims to know where the body of Dorothy Arnold, the long missing New York heiress, is buried, today, in an exclusive interview with the Boston AMERICAN, told just why he sought a parole in order to aid the authorities in solving the Arnold mystery.

Declaring that his efforts to save a girl from the hands of a New York "gang" is responsible for his present imprisonment, and reiterating his readiness to prove that the body buried in the West Point cellar is that of Dorothy Arnold, Genoures now demands a "show-down" on the part of those he claims are balking his efforts to solve the crime.

Alleging that these efforts are being thwarted by "certain interests," he incidentally calls upon the Arnold family to now explain a telephone conversation which he says occurred on the night before Dorothy disappeared.

TELLS OF 'PHONE TALK.

Genoures, who adds that he has been grossly misquoted in the press on the Arnold case, told the AMERICAN this story in the presence of Warden Aimer J. Davis:

It is amusing to me how different newspapers distort what I told as the gospel truth. In the first place, I will say again that the girl buried was Dorothy Arnold. I have said that before and still say so.

To open up a little more, I will also say that Dorothy Arnold, the night before she disappeared, was called on the telephone from a distance further than New York city by a man who arranged to meet her the next day.

I am sorry for Miss Arnold and will tell you that there was a discussion in the Arnold family when they knew who was on the telephone. If I am not telling the truth, ask the family about the telephone.

IS VICTIM OF "FRAME-UP."

Another phase about this so-called "squeal." They say that the first disagreement I ever had with the gang was when "Little" Louie and De Ponze were pulling a girl into the streets.

I objected and we had trouble. I called on the parents of the girl and she was watched. As a result the gang did not get her. They didn't like that and accused me of "falling for the soft stuff."

Just as sure as I can prove the Arnold story, I can prove that my stay in this jail is the result of a "frame-up" by three of that New York gang who kidded me into thinking that the Rev. A. M. Aucock was easy to get money from.

I'll tell you how it was. The four of us came to Providence. I was sent to meet the minister, whom I had never seen before, and was arrested.

I have since seen through the whole thing. When I was arrested the three—whom I can name if I want to—stole an automobile and beat it back to New York, letting me take the consequences.

WILL "LOOSEN UP" LATER.

I want it understood that I did not seek a parole. That New York lieutenant told me to petition for one. The parole board asked me if I was willing to go to New York and point out the house. I told them I was.

I can tell other things if I want to. It makes no difference to me whether they parole me or not. I know my life isn't worth a nickel, but I am not afraid of the gang, face to face.

They don't do business that way though. They will stick in the background. Let them bring De Ponze, "Little Louie" or any member of the Arnold family, or their attorney, and hear what I can tell them.

I'm not telling all I know about the gang. I'll loosen up some time, and then watch for results! I can convince any fair-minded person that this is the Arnold girl. Lieutenant Williams talked with me three times. Ask him what he thinks. He will not tell, of course, but he knows there's something to it.

DIDN'T CALL POLICE "PIKERS."

A Providence paper quoted me as saying that the New York police are a bunch of pikers. I never made that statement.

It is bad enough to be penned up here, trying to convince the people I am telling the truth without putting myself in worse. You've heard people say that "money talks." Well, it's talking in this Arnold case. A New York paper says that Miss Arnold is alive and that her parents know where she is. All right; then shut me up by telling the people where she is.

I have been asked why I did not tell this story before. Well, I wrote to a girl in New York and told her to see Lefty Lou and get my fine paid. Louie knows what he did when the girl told him.

I was treated worse than the gang if Lieutenant Williams took me to New York. Mind you, I didn't expect a brass band to meet me, like they did Dewey, I realized I was going to New York to face an ordeal and I was ready for it. I am ready to face it now.

WILL STICK TO TRUTH.

I started in with the truth in this case. Moreover, I will stick to it and see if there is a premium on honesty.

I know what I'm up against in this thing. Nobody here kicked me out as being crazy. The parole board knows I'm right. They questioned me, as well as did the Attorney-General, and, although I stuck to my story, I wasn't spilling all the beans in one session.

I have not much longer to serve. When my time is up, watch me; that's all. I'll prove to the world that I'm not a liar, even if it means my life the next minute.

GERMANY READY FOR PEACE, IS TOLD POPE

terms upon which the discussion would begin.

The neutral power might offer its services as mediator. No publicity would be given the peace effort, it was declared, until all the preliminaries had been perfected.

SAY ENGLAND MUST YIELD.

The allies, it was declared, are aware that if the United States should demand that Great Britain's illegal blockade of Germany be discontinued, England would be compelled to yield, and the advantage which would accrue to Germany would bring the war to an appreciably nearer.

It would relieve the economic strain on Germany, it was said, and result in a fatal impairment of the allies' advantage at sea over their chief enemy.

Pope Benedict, it was hinted, had intimated to President Wilson an inevitable consequence of a firm position taken by the United States in the interest of international law. It was said to be pointed out that all countries would yield as Germany had yielded, and as Germany had been compelled to modify the use of her principal weapon against her enemies because of the illegal uses made of it, so the allies should be made to give up their unlawful practices.

WOULD WEAKEN ALLIES.

Strategists here state that a full third of the allies' offensive strength would be lost if they gave up their arbitrary naval practices. The result would be so formidable in the eyes of the allies, they said, that peace on terms far less extravagant than they now profess to demand would be preferable to the prospects of a continuance of the war under the new conditions.

It is assumed here that when the time comes to consider peace, each belligerent will set up claims far in excess of what it expects to get, in order to be in a position to make concessions.

France and Great Britain, even more than Russia, are determined that Germany shall never again have the power to "menace the peace of Europe." Diplomats here believe the dismemberment of Germany would be the only way to accomplish this end.

ENGLAND WILL OBJECT.

Great Britain is not expected readily to agree to a liberalization of the laws of the sea, while France and Russia are inclined to put restrictions in the way of Germany's recovery of her trade and its future expansion.

Japan is expected to provide trouble for the peace congress. She promised China to restore Kiau Chau after the war, and she promised Great Britain that after the war she would discuss further possession of the Pacific Islands. Japan took from Germany.

There is little chance, it was learned in quarters close to both the Central empires and the Entente nations that the peace congress will be held in the United States. The possible selection, it was said, could be narrowed down to Switzerland and Holland. Holland's chances were believed to be superior by reason of her more central location and the ease with which the peace envoys and their secretaries would have access to the place chosen for the conferences.

RUMANIA GETS $30,000,000 LOAN

Peace Terms Acceptable to the Allies

Washington, May 8.—The peace terms to be prepared by the Entente powers, it is believed here, will be as follows:

1—Restoration of all the conquered territory held by the Teutonic allies and without condition.

2—Indemnities for Belgium and Serbia.

3—The rearrangement of Europe's map, where changes are made on national lines. This would give Italy a strip of Austrian territory, Serbia would get Bosnia and Herzegovina, and Alsace-Lorraine would go to France. Under this arrangement Bulgaria would be allowed to retain a large portion of Macedonia. The duchy of Luxembourg, for convenience, might be joined to Belgium.

4—A treaty declaring the Dardanelles and the Bosporus open and free to the ships of trade of all nations upon terms of equality.

5—Palestine may be erected into an independent kingdom or republic.

6—Retention of Egypt by Great Britain.

7—The end of Prussian militarism.

GERMANS AGAIN DRIVE AHEAD AT VERDUN

By International News Service.

London, May 8.—The Germans have taken the offensive out of the hands of the French and have delivered furious attacks on a fifteen-mile front north of Verdun, winning on both sides of the Meuse. The French admit German gains.

On the entire fifty-mile fan-shaped front around the great fortress, the Crown Prince has opened the most terrific battle of the campaign. The bombardment has attained a climax of violence, from the Argonne to far into the Woevre.

At the St. Mihiel salient, the Germans are showing signs of great activity. The gains registered are the greatest won by the Germans in the last month, and the largest registered in a space of twenty-four hours since the first few days of the battle.

TAKE TRENCHES BY STORM.

East of Hill No. 304, the dominating height west of the Meuse, against which the Crown Prince is concentrating the entire energy in this region, the Germans took by storm sections of the French communicating trenches. The attack was launched after an artillery bombardment, continuing two days with such violence that it changed the contour of whole sections of land.

The German troops swept forward on a wide front, stretching from Hill No. 294 as far as Dead Man Hill.

The French brought to bear a tremendous artillery and machine gun fire against the advancing ranks, inflicting heavy losses and stemming the attack on a great section of the front. Only the sector east of Hill No. 304 saw the Germans able to gain a footing.

ATTACK CREST OF HILL.

The crest of this hill, which is still held by the French, is reported under a terrific fire and fresh attacks were expected momentarily.

The crest commands a wide stretch of territory to the south reaching down to the vital supply line of Verdun, the Verdun-Paris railway.

Simultaneously with the great drive west of the Meuse, the Crown Prince threw forward forces in a series of repeated attacks on the opposite bank of the river on the front between Haudromont farm and Fort Douaumont.

Here again, the French brought to bear their "curtain fire." On the western flank of the front of attack, the Germans were able to penetrate first line trenches 500 metres wide, but in the centre were halted.

PREPARE ST. MIHIEL DRIVE.

With the opening of storming sections on the front due north of Verdun, the Crown Prince, apparently in preparation for a general closing in of the "iron ring" he is attempting to draw around the fortress, has let loose a furious artillery fire along the entire eastern and southeastern fronts in the Woevre.

Indications that he is also preparing to attempt to drive forward from St. Mihiel are seen in the great activity of the Germans in that section.

LIES 3 HOURS WITH HIS LEG CUT OFF

Pittsfield, May 8.—Charles W. Klenk, Jarvis, of Albany lost his right leg when a Boston & Albany train ran over him near the Union Station, and lay for three hours beside the track before he attracted attention. He is in the Hillcrest Mercy Hospital in a serious condition.

STRANGER SHELTERS TULLYS

Mrs. Patrick Tully of Marshfield, Oregon, who applied for the aid at City Hall, which she declared her uncle, William M. Wood, the woolen king, refused her, was given shelter by Joseph McHenry, in Mill street, Dorchester.

Mr. McHenry is the father-in-law of Daniel J. Sheehan, the custodian at City Hall, to whom Mrs. Tully made her application for assistance.

Men at City Hall who heard Mrs. Tully tell her story, visited the hotels where she had stopped and where bills had accumulated against her. The hotel managers, as soon as they had heard the story, even at second hand, immediately cancelled the bills.

Mr. Wood was absent all day from his home in Fairfield street, Back Bay. In his absence, Mrs. Wood said:

I really can't say very much about this affair. My husband has a niece named Tully. He has educated her and been very kind to her in the past. I haven't seen her for some years, but at that time she was an unusually beautiful girl.

She was here three years ago. I heard she was in town again, arriving here about two weeks ago. At that time my husband told me he was tired doing things for her and said he was not going to do anything more.

I don't know anything that happened since. If, as you say, the city sends people without funds to the poorhouse, I have no suggestion to offer.

Let her go to the poorhouse. It is good enough for her. I think she was very ill advised to make this trip East to ask my husband's assistance. I understand she had to borrow the money to come. She should have saved her money and staid in the West.

Mrs. Tully intimated that religious differences may have caused her estrangement from her uncle. She said:

I don't know why my uncle has so unexpectedly turned away from me. I know he did not approve of my father marrying my mother. And I think he did not approve of my marriage to Mr. Tully, who was a Canadian.

My uncle used to be a Catholic and although he had me brought up in a Catholic convent he did not want me to be a Catholic. Years ago he left the Catholic faith.

I would starve before I would ask for public aid. It is for my babies, I ask for charity.

Mrs. Tully did not cry during the recital, but her eyes showed plainly the effects of previous weeping.

HUB GIRL IS SUICIDE IN WEST

By International News Service.

San Francisco, May 8.—Suffering from melancholia, Miss Pauline Cushing, of Boston, killed herself by leaping from the third story of the Hahnemann Hospital, after a desperate struggle on the fire escape, with Miss Gertrude Donnellan, a nurse.

For nearly five minutes Miss Donnellan fought with the mad woman on the slender framework of iron, far above the ground. She had all but won, when, by a last convulsive effort, the patient threw herself over the railing.

Only by a desperate clutch on the iron bars did Miss Donnellan save herself from being dragged to death. Miss Cushing struck on a stone pavement and was instantly killed.

Miss Cushing was sent to the hospital by Mrs. F. G. Sanborn, president of the Woman's Board of the Exposition, who was active in traveler's aid during the exposition.

DOES RHEUMATISM BOTHER YOU?

The Doctors Say 'Use Musterole'

So many sufferers have found relief in MUSTEROLE that you ought to buy a small jar and try it.

Just spread it on with the fingers. Rub it in. First you feel a gentle glow, then a delicious, cooling comfort. MUSTEROLE routs the twinges, loosens up stiffened joints and muscles.

MUSTEROLE is a clean, white ointment, made with oil of mustard. It penetrates to the seat of pain and gives it away, but does not blister the tenderest skin.

It takes the place of the mussy, old-fashioned mustard plaster.

MUSTEROLE is recommended for Bronchitis, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Lumbago, Neuralgia, Sprains, Bruises, Stiff Neck, Headache, Colds, Soreness of the chest (it often prevents Pneumonia).

At your druggist's, in 25c and 50c jars, and a special large hospital size for $2.50.

Be sure you get the genuine MUSTEROLE. Refuse imitations—get what you ask for. The Musterole Company, Cleveland, Ohio.

Nude 'Policeman' Shocks Lowell Church-Goers

Lowell, May 8.—Mark Rolfe, twenty-six, said to hail from Centralville, rushed into Merrimack square Sunday noon, took the position usually held by the traffic policeman, and began to direct the movements of passing automobiles and pedestrians.

There would have been nothing striking in this incident, under normal conditions. The young man, however, created an immediate sensation, for he stood absolutely nude.

Throngs of church-goers, homeward bound, were horrified. One man tried to throw his overcoat about Rolfe, who eluded him and ran through Prescott street, with a crowd in pursuit.

A telephone call had just started a squad of patrolmen out of the Market street station when Rolfe, exhausted, frightened, rushed through a side door and into the arms of Inspector John Walsh.

He was booked for safe keeping and will probably be sent to Worcester for observation.

MRS. WHITE, NOTED SUFFRAGIST, DIES

Concord, N. H., May 8.—Mrs. Armenia S. White, a pioneer advocate of woman suffrage, is dead at the home of her son, at the age of ninety. Mrs. White was born in Mendon, Mass. Her husband, Nathaniel White, drove a stage coach between this city and Boston.

Was All Run Down But Father John's Medicine Brought Health

"I was generally run down. Had the services of two doctors who did not help me. Father John's Medicine was recommended to me and I used it and am now in the best of health." (Signed) Miss Lena Pessatty, 8 Mayhew Ship, Milford, Mass.

Whenever you get run down—summer or winter—Father John's Medicine is the best tonic and tissue builder. By means of the nourishing food elements which it contains it rebuilds wasted tissue, gives new strength and health to those who have become thin, pale and run down. It is not a patent medicine and contains no alcohol or dangerous drugs in any form.—Advertisement.

MEXICAN RAIDS ON TEXAS TOWNS CAUSE DEMANDS, 'TAKE LID OFF'

Funston at the War Department confirming the message previously received from the collector of customs at Eagle Pass, about the raid by Mexican bandits at Glenn Springs, in the Big Bend country, in Texas.

Mexicans numbering about fifty attacked small American detachment at Glenn Springs at 11.30 Friday night, killing three American soldiers and one boy, and wounding two soldiers. Four soldiers and one civilian are reported missing. The town was looted.

It was reported that Boquillas was raided Saturday morning, presumably by the same band. Several civilians are missing.

A relief detachment of American soldiers reached Glenn Falls at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and another left Marathon for the same place on motor truck at 10 this morning.

DEMAND EXPLANATION.

Other dispatches indicated that at least two of the civilians captured by Mexicans were later shot. One of these was the nine-year-old boy, Glenn Compton.

State Department officials said it will be necessary to call the raid to the attention of the Mexican government. General Scott is understood also to have communicated the facts to General Obregon with a view to getting a possible explanation from him as Mexican minister of war.

Army officials believe a prompt explanation from Carranza is demanded in the circumstances. In secret communications to the State Department, through his diplomatic representative, Carranza has insisted that the Mexican bandits have been scattered.

Additional information forwarded to the War Department tonight by General Funston showed there were only nine men in the detachment at Glenn Springs under command of Sergeant Smith. This camp at Glenn Springs is not far from San Jacinto on the border, south of the town of Alpine, Texas.

OVER 200 MEXICAN RAIDERS.

The news of the raid first was received from private citizens of Marathon, Texas, after the arrival of a truck bearing three dead and two wounded American soldiers. The wounded soldiers reported that two other wounded men had been left on the field. Sergeant Smith was one of the men wounded.

Although the official report of General Funston said the Mexicans numbered above fifty, he reported that advices had been received indicating that from 200 to 500 Mexicans participated in the raid.

The wounded soldiers informed Marathon citizens that the Mexicans cheered both Villa and Carranza as they charged across the boundary line. Anger was displayed by army officials today in discussing this new border raid. They stated that this could not be charged by the Mexican government as a plot to force intervention.

DEMAND PROTECTION.

Rather than new manifestation of revolutionary activity is accepted as an indication that Mexico is unable to maintain order along the American border and unable to prevent attacks on American towns.

The continued presence of troops, and the presence of additional troops to guard the border are demanded under the circumstances, declare the army officers. General Scott advised the War Department that he was preparing to resume his conferences with General Obregon following the conditional acceptance of the El Paso agreement by Mexico.

President Wilson later sent a communication to General Scott through the War Department. Officials would not say what references it made to the Glenn Springs border outrage. In his dispatches to the War Department, General Funston said he had sent two troops of the Eighth Cavalry from Big Bliss and two troops of the Fourteenth Cavalry from Fort Clark as a relief expedition.

TEXANS ACT.

Deputy Sheriff Tex. W. Kellis, heading a posse of fifty Texans, started in pursuit of the Mexicans who raided Glenn Springs and Boquillas Friday night and Saturday morning. Every member of the posse is familiar with the topography of the Big Bend country and is expert with both rifle and revolver. The Mexicans are said to be camped on both sides of the river Boquillas and Boquillas del Carmen.

John P. Denny, manager of the International Mines Company, reported to Funston that the three dead soldiers and one dead civilian were brought to Marathon in a motor truck by two of the troopers who had been mortally wounded themselves. The soldiers killed were Privates Cohen, Colcock and Rodgers.

Within an hour after the receipt of the report from Denny, General Funston, with the approval of General Hugh L. Scott, issued orders for a new expedition to start from El Paso. The train got away at 6 p. m. It carried troops A and B of the Eighth Cavalry, commanded by Major George T. Langhorne, Captain George W. Kirkpatrick and Captain James C. Rhea.

PURSUIT UNDER WAY.

This force will be joined en route by two troops of the Fourteenth Cavalry, under Colonel Frederick W. Sibley, and a machine gun platoon. Colonel Sibley will be in command when he joins. The equipment carried from El Paso consisted of four motor trucks and four mule team wagons, cavalry mounts for the men and several tons of field rations.

The officials of the International Mines Company have placed all of their equipment, which consists of more than 100 mule teams and several motor trucks, at the disposal of General Funston.

The new column, with orders to detrain at Marathon, Texas, at daylight, began a forced march to Glenn Springs and Boquillas.

General Funston issued orders that the Mexicans responsible for the raid must be captured or killed. No official statement was given out, but it is known Colonel Sibley's orders do not contemplate that he end the pursuit when the border is reached. The circumstances of this raid nullified any possible effect the tentative agreement made between General Hugh L. Scott and Mexican Minister of War Obregon could have on the situation.

DETAILS OF RAID.

The raid at Glenn Springs started at 11.30 Friday night. The attack was made both with firearms and burning torches. Sergeant Smith and eight men fought from the windows of a wooden shack which they had intended to occupy during the cold season. The five or six civilians in the place sought refuge with the soldiers and gave such aid as was possible in defending the shack.

The siege had lasted two hours before the Mexicans gained any advantage. During this time, however, they destroyed all tents and burned the two buildings in the settlement. In a rush attack with flaming torches they managed to set fire to the shack in which the soldiers were fighting. This forced the soldiers to quit the building and four of them were killed in rushing from the burning structure. All members of the party were badly burned.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Compton fell dead from a Mexican bullet as he started to run with the others.

DYING MEN RUN MOTOR.

Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Ellis, who were in the settlement when the fighting started, accompanied by a Captain Woods, who is interested in the Candelilla wax plant, fled to the mountains, where they remained for the night.

Under cover of smoke from the burning buildings, Sergeant Smith managed to load the bodies of the three dead troopers and the little Compton boy on a motor truck, which was driven in charge of two other troopers, who had themselves been badly wounded. The truck was started for Marathon and brought out the first news of the raid. With the dead and seriously wounded out of the way, Sergeant Smith again turned his attention to the bandits. He fought as best he could despite that fact that he had only three men left, each of whom had been wounded.

FOUGHT TILL EXHAUSTED.

At 3 o'clock he was compelled to retire to the refuge of the hills only because his men could not stand and fight, owing to their weakened physical condition.

It was said a number of the Mexicans were made. No Mexicans, dead or injured, were found by representatives of the mining company who visited the scene late yesterday and again this morning. The last report received by General Funston tells that Sergeant Smith was badly burned. Private W. E. Burck was shot through both legs and badly burned. Private Deferes was shot through one arm and badly burned. The entire party would have been killed on leaving the shack only for the smoke which obscured the view of the Mexicans.

GET $1,500 CASH BOOTY.

The booty obtained at Deemer's store included $1,000 in cash. At another store owned by E. Rodriguez, a large quantity of dry goods and $500 in cash was secured. Rodriguez escaped to the hills, as did Champ Woods, a chauffeur employed by the International Mines Company. Woods has since turned up at Noria Ranch, several miles from Boquillas.

W. T. Butler, who had only recently been taken to the mine of the International Mines Company to become superintendent of the tramway was also at Deemer's store, on his way back to Marathon, when the raid took place.

J. B. Woods of El Paso, father of Champ Woods, one of the first to receive word of the assault on Glenn Springs and Deemer's place, was scheduled to leave tonight with the special train carrying the two troops of the Eighth Cavalry to Marathon.

J. B. Woods knows every foot of the arid desert country in the Big Bend district, and the rolling, desert stretches of the country below the international boundary, into which the Mexicans are believed to have fled after their attack at Glenn Springs and Deemer's.

BIG PIERS BURN IN JACKSONVILLE

By International News Service.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 8.—Fire destroyed the piers of the East Coast Railroad in South Jacksonville and caused a loss estimated by railroad officials at $100,000. Several cars loaded with lumber and six barges loaded with lumber were consumed. A mass of flames floated down the river, endangering the piers of the Clyde Line, the Merchants & Miners Transportation Company and the R. O. Palmer Fiber Company.

CAPTAIN DUQUESNE FOUND BADLY HURT

Montevideo, Uruguay, May 8.—Captain Fritz Duquesne, a German-Boer New York, explorer and soldier of fortune, who was in command of an expedition into Bolivian wilds, has been found by troops at Rio Picomayo in a badly wounded state, after a battle in which his expedition had attacked and defeated a band of Indians on the Bolivian frontier.

Aid was sent to the wounded explorer, who is expected to recover.

FIRES SHOTS AT FIVE MEN IN STOLEN CAR

Four shots were fired by a Medford policeman in an automobile chase to recover the car of Fred W. Small of Porter street, Malden, which was stolen in Dorchester while he was visiting a friend there.

The machine was recognized by Patrolman Sheehey in Medford square, and, realizing that the five occupants were unlawful rifle to the car, jumped into another and chased them.

They refused to stop until he fired four times and followed them more than a mile. Then the driver of the fugitive machine ran into a post and the five young men in it jumped out.

Three of these Sheehey got, according to the Medford police, who gave their names as Frank J. Cleary of Middleton street, Dorchester; George F. Hannon of Glenway street, Dorchester, and Joseph J. McGough of Quincy street, Roxbury.

WOMAN KILLED WHEN AUTO OVERTURNS

Salem, N. H., May 8.—Mrs. Harriett R. Mahoney, twenty-one, wife of Timothy J. Mahoney, a Bay State Street Railway employe of Middlesex street, Haverhill, was crushed to death beneath an overturned automobile on the Rockingham turnpike.

Her sister, Mrs. Margaret Gauvin, wife of George Gauvin of Winter street, Haverhill, escaped injury, and Frank Gordon of Abbott street, Lawrence, sustained a broken arm. Frank W. Donovan, twenty-three, of Park street, Lawrence, operator of the automobile, escaped injury. He was arrested and will appear in court today.

A heavy electric storm left the roads in bad condition. Just before the accident Donovan tried to check the machine by applying the brakes. The car skidded, went off the road, struck a tree and overturned.

Mrs. Mahoney was thrown from the car but was caught beneath it when it overturned, breaking her spine. She died a few minutes after the crash. Gordon, who was on the back seat directly behind Mrs. Mahoney, was thrown clear of the car and landed with his arms beneath him.

GREAT CANAL AT MARSEILLES IS OPENED

Marseilles, May 8.—The great canal connecting Marseilles with the river Rhone was opened here. The canal connects London with the Mediterranean by an almost straight line, making Marseilles the greatest gateway to the East and rendering it the chief clearing house for all North African trade.

Fifty miles long, it has taken twelve years to build and cost $28,000,000. Nearly five miles of the canal consists of a subterranean tunnel, seventy-two feet wide, making it the widest tunnel in the world.

The subterranean waterway is forty-five feet high. It was blasted out of the rocky Nerthe Mountains and is France's most wonderful engineering achievement. The completion of the canal at this moment demonstrates the enormous resources that France is able to employ even at the height of the world's greatest war.

The canal enables Marseilles to expand industrially along the shores of the great inland gulf known as Etang de Berre. The plan is to make Marseilles a free port which will give the final deathblow to Hamburg. It is also planned to provide storehouses for goods passing through the Panama canal, particularly oil.

The canal was officially opened by Minister of Commerce Etienne Clementel, Minister of Public Works Marcel Sembat and Under-Secretary for Subsistence Joseph Thierry.

MISS RICE IS FLOWER GIRL

ANTI-SUFFRAGE MATINEE DRAWS SOCIETY

MISS BARBARA RICE.
She was one of the flower girls at the Anti-Suffrage divertissement at the Wilbur Theatre today.

Scores of debutantes selling sweets, flowers, ushering and serving tea added to the interest and social brilliance of the matinee given today at the Wilbur Theatre by the Anti-Suffrage Association.

Miss Mary Shreve Ames was in charge of the list of patronesses, Mrs. James Lee was chairman of the production committee and Mrs. Samuel J. Mixter and W. Graydon Stetson were her associates.

Generous contributions of flowers were made by those who owned conservatories, and the group of flower girls included Misses Augusta and Marie Converse, Miss Elizabeth Burgess, Miss Isabella Mumford, Miss Barbara Rice, Miss Isabella Lee and Miss Charlotte Loring.

Miss Rice has taken part in a number of society events since she came out. Last week she appeared as a member of "the opium gang" in the Vincent Club show. She also assisted at the production of "The Royal Family," given at the Colonial Theatre, two weeks ago.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Rice of Westwood.

The girls who ushered and later served tea were the Misses Christiana Councilman, Sarah Sherburne, Ellen Tufts, Elsie Dow and Katherine Walker.

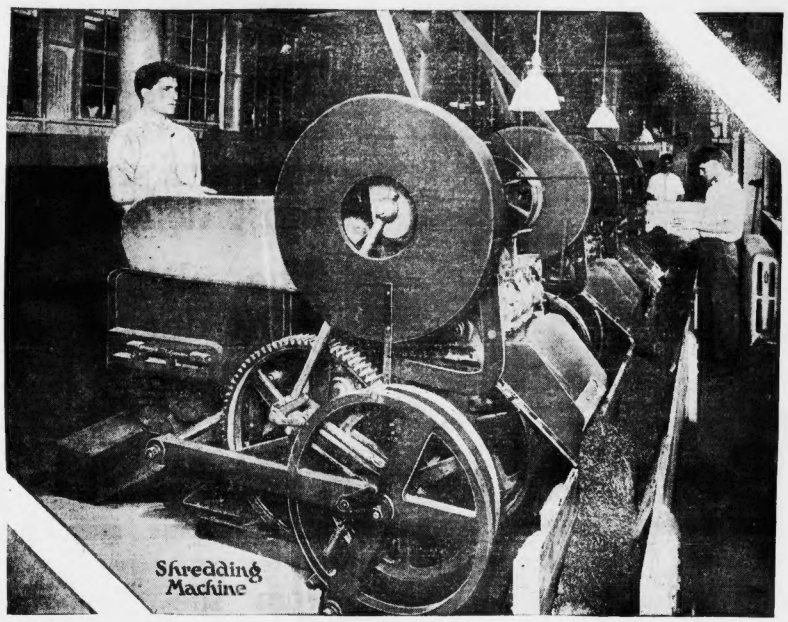
EGYPTIENNE STRAIGHTS CIGARETTES

Cork Tips Plain Ends



The Pure Turkish Tobacco in STRAIGHTS is Cut by these Machines Mr. Smoker:

YOU men who many times a day, before lighting a cigarette, press it between your fingers or tap it gently on your thumb nail to loosen the tobacco—you men little appreciate how carefully the contents of STRAIGHTS are prepared.

THE tobacco leaves are fed into the above pictured machines, which finely shred them. This shredding process must be done so carefully to avoid bruising the tobacco that the knives of the machines are removed every four minutes to be resharpened. It is because these machines cut the tobacco so finely that it is easily loosened before smoking.

THE shredded tobacco is next carried, automatically, into a machine known as the Turkish Dust Remover, where every particle of that snuff-like substance which spoils many cigarettes is removed. This ingenious contrivance, a mammoth sifter, was perfected by Mr. W. H. O'Brien, Vice-President of The American Tobacco Company, in charge of cigarette manufacturing, and is used exclusively in this factory.

IF when you are next in New York City you should care to observe the various machines in operation and to see for yourself the perfect cleanliness that prevails throughout the entire factory, drop a postal to the STRAIGHTS factory, 337-347 West 27th street, and a card of invitation will be sent you promptly.

ONE thing is inevitable. After seeing this marvelous factory you will agree with Alfred W. McCann of the New York Globe, America's foremost authority on factory sanitation, that you CAN smoke STRAIGHTS with every certainty of their goodness and purity.

AWFUL PAIN FROM RINGWORM ON FACE

Then On Head. Itched Terribly. Very Large, Skin Sore and Inflamed. Had Wet Scales on It.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"I felt pimples coming out on my face, then on my head, and I began to scratch them for they itched terribly. The pimples were large and red and after a while they festered and seemed to run together like one great boil and then I knew it was ringworm. The fingernails was very large and the skin was sore and inflamed and had wet scales on it. I felt awful pain and I lost a great deal of sleep.

"I used a number of remedies. Then my hair began to fall out. A friend told me about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I got them as soon as possible. They stopped the itching and falling out of my hair and I only used four cakes of Cuticura Soap and four boxes of Cuticura Ointment and I was healed." NEW BEST BABY CONTEST IS UNDER WAY

The contest to determine the Best Baby in Greater Boston closed Saturday night, but the Better Baby Editor now announces the second in the series of contests designed to select the finest baby in the country.

The contest which closed Saturday night was for Metropolitan Boston only. The contest which opens today is for the rest of New England. Entries in this new contest will be grouped in seven districts, as follows:

Connecticut, east of the Connecticut River.

Massachusetts east of the Connecticut, excluding Metropolitan Boston.

Massachusetts west of the Connecticut.

Rhode Island.

New Hampshire.

Vermont.

Maine.

In each of the seven districts, a gold medal will be awarded the finest baby, silver medals to the second and third best, and bronze medals to the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh best.

That means seven medals in each of the seven districts or seven gold medals, two silver medals and four bronze medals.

Then the seven babies receiving the gold medals will compete for the championship silver cup.

And the baby winning the championship cup in Greater Boston.

The winner, the best baby in New England, will compete in the national championship.

Entries will be received beginning at once. For particulars watch the AMERICAN.

Marconi Tells of Progress in War Wireless

By International News Service.

London, May 8.—Guglielmo Marconi has just arrived in London from Italy with reams of important and far-reaching wireless developments. In an interview he said:

"The new developments not only make wireless communication in the war zone more effective, but also make it difficult for the enemy to intercept or tap messages.

"The improvements also apply to instruments on aeroplanes and airships. Hitherto aeroplanes have been at a disadvantage because, while able to transmit messages, they have been unable to receive owing to the noise of the engine drowning out the wireless signals. Now we are able to strengthen the receiving signals sufficiently to enable messages to be taken."

Miss Anne Morgan Defines
WOMAN'S PLACE IN WAR
In an Exclusive Interview

MISS ANNE MORGAN.

"The woman who in time of war saves the dollar in the homes saves the nation in the field."

With this statement Miss Anne Morgan, daughter of the greatest financial genius of his time, began her reply to the question:

"What will be the mission of the American woman in case of a war with any Power?"

New York, May 8.—From coast to coast the girls have been marching. They have been yearning about the use of a rifle. They have been getting some idea of nursing the injured. She for the first time since the big subject of woman's part in the preparedness movement began to be discussed, the clear-thinking daughter of a man whose vision could take in a nation at a time, has told up to woman her actual province in a period of stress.

Miss Morgan was directing preparation for the Shakespeare Circus at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory for the benefit of the Vacation Association. This association has been one of Miss Morgan's pet organizations for the betterment of the condition of women, and for making them independent.

About her in the armory were long lines of gun racks and warlike indications that led her to think of women and of preparedness as she directed the finishing touches of the Circus.

THE DUTY OF WOMEN.

"I do not think," said Miss Morgan, "that it is necessary for women to march in parades. But the American mother must discipline her boy in the home until he is fourteen years of age and then see that he is given military training."

She continued:

There will be no women with rifles in the field. There will be small use for women with shovels to dig trenches. Even in the nursing department the actual field work of the hospital is done by men. In an army such as ours the great bulk of its supplies are manufactured in large quantities and supplied by contract. The woman no longer makes the shirts and shoes and socks with her own hands. She is part of a new and wonderful governmental machine, having just as important and vital a task as the man in the field.

Once upon a time when the man went to war the woman remained home and wept. Now she must remain at home and do her part of the work. It deals with the economy of the home—with the food and meat question. It deals with the keeping in circulation of the blood of a country so that the fighting body may not suffer with congestion.

There are 20,000,000 women in the United States who will be a part of the national forces in case of war. They command the homes. Few of them, I believe, realize the important role they are to play.

The lesson of the European war has shown to plainly just what this course must be. In absolute governments like Russia, Turkey and Germany, where authority is vested in an imperial centre, the government have put into force laws for the supply of food, for taking care of the bread and meat and for equalizing the output that the chances by want will be reduced to the minimum.

Did it ever occur to our women that we have no such governmental authority and no such means of enforcing it as have these absolute countries?

WEALTHY PAY FIRST.

We have not. It then becomes the business of every woman in America to become a temporary Czar, Sultan or Kaiser in her own little empire to know what expenses must be cut and how to cut them, and to take the active administration of home economies just as though a general law had placed them in effect and a paternal government stood at her elbow to enforce it.

And the study and practice of this economy is as much necessary with the woman of millions as with the woman who lives in a cottage.

MAINE CENTRAL R. R. BOSTON AND MAINE R. R.

The more one has in war the larger the tax for the maintenance of war. It is upon the wealthy that the first drain of war expense falls. All false pretense, all living for appearances and making display beyond one's means must be automatically cut to meet a war situation.

It is going to take brains and study. The woman abroad has found herself with even the supply of necessities reduced. In Germany and Austria bread has been limited. In Germany a request that meat be cut down a week and that luxuries be curtailed has been made. But in a country like England, which is like our own in many respects, the success of the nation economically is a business matter, and the individual woman is, in the last analysis, the power behind the salvation of the country.

In modern war it takes every dollar that a country can raise to pay the expense. This money does not grow on trees. The people must provide it. Every dollar that goes into munition and the pay of an army comes out of something else.

If one will trace the dollars that form the basic power of a nation in arms, they will be found separating in millions of little streams, each one of which goes to a home. In each home there is usually the hand of a woman guiding the economic features of the household. She must squeeze the glory out of her weekly allowance, and it is her tribute that makes largely for success.

This is one of the new conditions made by modern war. It is made by the tremendous increase in expense, and the remarkable extension of a war condition so that no part of a national whole escapes its share of the burden.

WOMEN'S NEW DUTIES.

Women must learn how to make gradual and wise economies. To suddenly take the revenue from one line of trade would mean injustice and ruin to that line. Madame Conservator of the Purse must not only seek to protect her own household, but she must remember that she is her sister's keeper and that her sister is the entire community.

There will be, of course, women who will nurse the sick. Women will play various parts in any war, but the great mass of the women of America will not be called upon to leave their homes and fireside. They will have to do no marching, no cooking, no handling of weapons. The percentage of them who will actually work in industrial plants making ammunition and clothing will be small relatively. The backbone of the army of women will be in the homes, and there will be the real foundation for the nation's success.

Woman's part is big, it is dignified and it is important. It is womanly, and there is no question, but that the American woman will meet with intelligence the situation, whatever it may be, if war should come to our land.

London May Put 'Shorter Day' in Force Saturday

By W. ORTON TEWSON,
Special Correspondent of International News Service.

London, May 8.—The House of Commons meets especially today to consider the daylight saving motion, which it is expected, the government will father.

If the House agrees, as it is almost certain to do, the scheme will be put into operation next Saturday night at midnight.

The only other business is the debate on the motion calling for immediate and material modification of the new regulation under the defence of the realm act dealing with Cabinet secrets.

Pittsburgh Strike "Joan of Arc" Held on Murder Charge

MISS ANNA BELL.

Pittsburgh, May 8.—Foremost of the strike leaders now out on bail is twenty-year-old Miss Anna Bell. The charge against the rioters is inciting to riot and accessory before the fact of murder. The police accuse Miss Bell of being the leader of the female section of the rioters. Those murdered more than 100.

Early in the strike, the police say, Miss Bell proclaimed herself a Joan of Arc and summarily took under her command the women. The police add that she proved herself an able leader in the fatal riots of Tuesday.

When the girl was released on bail pending hearing on the murder charge she laughed. She viewed her arrest with the utmost unconcern.

LOYOLA SOCIETY SINGS GOUNOD'S "REDEMPTION"

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Symphony Hall was well filled last night with friends of Boston College and music lovers generally, who assembled to hear Gounod's "Redemption" performed by the Loyola Musical Society. The organization consists of 250 singers, many of them from Catholic Church choirs, who were trained by James M. McLaughlin for the occasion.

The soloists were Caroline Hudson Alexander, Nora Burke, Evan Williams, Gwylym Miles and Frederick Martin, all well known concert singers, and there was an orchestra of sixty-eight players from the Boston Festival Orchestra.

"The Redemption," as an oratorio, ranks far below "The Messiah," "Elijah," and "The Creation." It is in Gounod's ultra choral style and is marked by lacking in the melody so noticeable in his operatic works and his masses. The solo numbers are, for the most part, uninspired, and the choruses, with two exceptions, are merely sonorous and pompous. "Unfold, Ye Portals Everlasting," and "Lovely Appear" are superb chorales, but fine as they are they do not repay an evening of boredom.

Mr. McLaughlin's chorus sings very well, considering that it is a hastily assembled aggregation. As a conductor he revealed powers that demand respect. Evan Williams is a very polished and accomplished singer, who made a big personal hit. The other soloists did as well as could be expected with the music set before them.

The library of Catholic Church music contains so much that is glorious, that it is too bad some of the wonderful masses now banished from the church could not be performed by this Catholic chorus. The genius of Beethoven, Haydn, Mozart and Verdi has been invisibly expended in religious music, and there is unquestionably a big field here for a fine chorus to specialize in the big works which are no longer accepted for church service, but which should not be allowed to be forgotten.

SPEAKER BREAKS IT UP

Ex-Red Sox Triples in Eighth Frame—Wallop Nets Indians Victory Over White Sox.

CHICAGO, May 8.—Tris Speaker sent some 21,000 White Sox fans home in dejection from Comiskey Park yesterday afternoon by insisting upon inserting a triple just where it would do the most harm to the cause of the home brigade.

Said shot was in frame No. 8, when two Indians rested on the hassocks and the count stood 3-2 in favor of Cleveland.

Prior to the eighth Urban Faber, pride of Cascade, Ia., had baffled Tris and his pals consistently enough to hold a 2-1 lead. But after he passed O'Neill in the fatal eighth and Wambsganss had been dispensed of, Urban began to list at an alarming rate.

A pinch single by Roth, former Sox, and "Bobby" stock of second gave the fans an inkling that some thing was about to happen. Graney and Turner came through with safeties that sent O'Neill and Roth home and made the score read, Cleveland 3, Chicago 2.

"SPOKE" COMES THROUGH.

To disconcert the mighty "Spoke," Rowland decided to send "Lefty" Williams to the relief of Faber after Turner's single. But Tris refused to be outguessed by this bit of strategy. He straightaway insisted that old Ionian far and away over John Collins' head, and, before "Shano" had retrieved the pill, Tris had pulled up at third and the count was 5-2.

Needless to say this timely triple took from the White Sox what little "pep" remained and the rest of the game was played merely to make the fourth straight victory of Cleveland over the Chicagoans entirely legal.

Speaker had the crowd "pulling" for him long before the eighth, though.

As early as the third round Tris out in with a regular Speakeresque grab. Welk Felsch on first via a hit, and only one out, John Collins swatted one of Cicotte's curves into short centre. The ball went on a line that would have been a double at least had

KUDOS GOES TO COLLINS.

But a glance at the table of contents will show that Tris was there, also slamming glue, or as many as you please, will fail to show a two-base hit for Collins.

Tris had only one other chance, which he accepted as easily it looked like a shame to pay a man so much money to have so much fun. Speaker also got a single, which was the only blow the Indians wasted.

With two gone in the opening session Felsch's single and E. Collins' double resulted in a run for Chicago in the third, and Felsch's double, an error and Fournier's single tallied the other run for the White Sox.

The Indians looked real savage in the series which ended yesterday and Chicago fans are of the opinion Speaker's presence has considerable to do with the "heads up" style of play that Lee Fohl's men are using.

The Clevelanders seem to have a great deal more confidence in themselves since they have Tris in with them and they certainly are rapidly entering the category of scrappy ball clubs.

Speaker Has Made Cleveland Club N. B.: Didn't J. Evers Make Braves?

By HERMAN NICKERSON.

It is almost beyond belief, but a study of the standing of the American League is convincing—the Cleveland club is really in the lead and looks to be a contender for the honors of that organization, for a time at least.

This is good news for all the clubs in the league, for the transformation from a tailend proposition to one that will bear watching means larger crowds, more interest in the entire league and profit to all concerned.

The Indians' position as leader in the standing recalls the manner in which the Braves were installed in 1914. They took the town of Boston by storm and kept up a steady gait, losing now and then, but coming back strong with plenty of fight in the finish.

Their opponents for a time regarded them as joke-writers and couldn't figure them as being able to keep up the pace they had struck and about everybody, outside the club itself, expected them to crack wide open. It is a matter of baseball history that they didn't crack.

The Braves kept right on their way grabbing a ball game and losing one, but getting more than their lost on the race in the younger organization long to be anybody's.

Not a fan in Boston kicked when Johnny Evers came to Boston, though there was a bit of soreness in Chicago. In the relation of fan and club, the viewpoint is the thing.

THIS HAS BEEN MISSED.

In the Speaker case it looks as if it had been unfortunate for the World Beaters to lose a man who in Spring training showed so clearly that he was in for a big year.

On the other hand, what is there to hinder an owner from disposing of his player when offered a fortune? If there is any weakening to his organization he owns it and must stand the loss.

The season's work will prove the wisdom of the sale of Tris. Just now it looks very much as if the World Beaters had (they possessed) what would have been fan in the lead, but figuring the distance travelled, the even break in games won and lost in the face of a weakened pitching staff and you may rest assured that the American crew has a mighty fine chance to win again, even without Speaker's presence in the field and at bat and on the bases.

Manager Bill Carrigan has, in my opinion, the best pitching staff in either league. Just now they may not look like it, but wait for about thirty days and then see what they look like. The clubs have just started, so to speak.

There is plenty of good material on the Champions, behind the bat, in the infield and the outfield is by no means weak either. Duffy Lewis is playing centre very acceptably, while Hooper is predicted to be expected to get him from the indications in the work of Hot Springs. He is a better ball player today than ever, which is saying a page full.

RED SOX SHOULD "COME."

The infield is working together like well balanced machine and there will be a return to the organized hitting, without which there is little to hope for any league.

The World's Champions have everything that goes to make up a championship team; plenty of good pitchers, good catching staff, hard hitters and clever fielders with proper direction. Just wait. The seasoned runner is a long race strikes an even gait and holds it for his sprint into the end.

Just now the Carrigan crew is in a position to start something. They have played fair ball against the breaks in the game and have a hard week ahead of them with the game against the Highlanders today and the Cleveland series.

The week should furnish good baseball and I look to see the World Beaters come through with a majority of the games played. This is going to be theirs from start to finish. Just as they face the Western clubs.

LUCK.

The baseball fan, arising from his bed, Gazed out upon a clear and sunny sky,
"O, happy day! O, happy day!" he said,
"A wild and happy baseball fan am I!"

"Today," he cried, "I have a holiday,
And it is like a June day, rich and rare,
And I shall go and see the Red Sox play
Or else the Braves—I really do not care.

"It matters not to me if Sox or Braves,
Or any other ball team plays the game,
It matters not if they be champs or slaves—
The sky is clear, the sun is all aflame."

He picked the paper up and put it down,
And reeled and landed limply on his head.
The Braves and Red Sox both were out of town—

(We dare not print the final words he said.)

Tygers at Last Topple Over Jinx Hurler

Detroit, May 8.—Detroit annexed a 3-1 victory over the Browns in the final game of the series, notwithstanding the fact that Carl Weilman, the Tyger's Jinx, was on the mound for the visitors.

Cobb went hitless. The score:

NEHF OR BARNES IN BOX

Braves Wind Up Stay in New York Today—Then Hit Out for 14 Battles in West.

NEW YORK, May 8.—The Giants and Braves will follow Horace Greeley's advice along about 5 o'clock this afternoon. The Giants especially hope to profit thereby.

Having attained farthest south, they have high hopes a jaunt through the West will bring them back to some semblance of a standing. Just now they are the Patsy Bolivars of the National League. They resent it, but don't seem to be able to prevent it.

George Stallings is expected to start either Nehf or Barnes against the Giants this afternoon, while it would not be surprising if McGraw sent Texas back in an effort to wipe out his failure of Saturday, when he was knocked from the box in the innings. If Texeau doesn't work Stroud is likely the choice.

CLEAR AND BRIGHT.

The Polo Grounds are in good condition, there having been no rain for twenty-four hours, which is going some this damp, dismal so-called Spring.

Winning two games in a row here has Stallings and his charges feeling mighty good. The Giants have come close, twice losing out by one run, also in extra innings, which is why skipper George and his peppery crew are so joyous.

They have a feeling the Giants are due to get started and are tickled that they already won the honors in the series.

OPEN TOUR IN CHICAGO.

The Braves open their Western tour in Chicago Wednesday. Only three games are to be played with the club of Tinker. The same number of scraps will be fought in Pittsburgh the next week, with four on the bill at Cincinnati and St. Louis. Stallings has high hopes Sherwood Magee will show up in Chicago ready for work. At that, Edgar Collins has played through half the games here both days.

The Boss again denied today he has any intention of letting Joey Connolly go to Cincinnati or any place else.

YALE IS PICKED TO WIN

Ellis, Harvard's Track Foe Saturday, Seemingly Holds Edge by Virtue of Tiger Triumph.

THE Yale track hopefuls, forty strong, will arrive in Boston late Friday afternoon from New Haven, and will motor out to Auburndale, where headquarters will be established at the Woodland Park Hotel.

After a night's sleep the squad will spend Saturday forenoon in sight-seeing and will "make" the Stadium after lunch, as starting time for the meet with Harvard is 3 o'clock.

Edward E. Babb of the B. A. A. and a member of the National Committee of the A. A. U., has been agreed on as referee. His assistants will be men intimately connected with amateur and college athletics in New England.

The Elis, because of their impressive victory over Princeton Saturday, are the favorites to wear the victor's laurels next Saturday, especially since Cornell treated Harvard to one of the soundest trouncings the Crimson was ever forced to take on the track and field.

However, when all is said and done, track games are not always won by first-place men; the runner-up athletes often determining the ultimate outcome of the meet.

Toney Loses 2-Hit Game to Cards, 1-0

St. Louis, May 8.—The Cardinals gathered but two hits in their 1-0 victory over the Reds and both came in the fourth inning. With one out, Long bounced a single off Toney's glove and scored on Miller's double. Ames held the Reds to four hits, one in the first, two in the third and one in the fifth, retiring the last twelve batters in a row.

Beck was spiked by Herzog in the second frame, and Roy Corhan played his first game at short for the Cardinals. The score:

BOXING BRIEFS AND GOSSIP

The week's boxing menu embraces two shows. What's better, it looks as if the fans are not going to regret them.

Tomorrow night, at the Arena, Walter Butler of Revere and Frankie Mack of Beachmont will meet in their third tussle of the season. No, the mill won't be over-fought. Seems a little number that should be well worth seeing, and, as the popular scale of assessments will prevail, a sure-enough, regular crowd should pack the St. Botolph street castle.

The Armory A. A. hasn't done a lick of business since moving into its summer and fall home. Mind Murray and Eric Lewis liked their recent bookings—heaviness they claim they did —but the fans didn't and stayed away.

The two other Butler-Mack set-tos were jammed full of action. The first one, the night Butler was pulled out of an orchestra chair at the Hippodrome and subbed for Fred de Yelle of Taunton, holder of New England's lightweight title, was the best one of the pair. Butler was in form at that stage of the game, and though tossed up more or less, due to a tough number with Harry Condon a few nights previously, fought on high and was right there with Mack at the final bell.

Re-matched with Mack, Butler worked entirely too hard in training quarters, with the result that when he entered the ring with the Beachmost battler in the second melee he was way off his usual form and no shape to do himself justice. Referee Flaherty deemed Mack the right there with Frankie at the final bell and again was a draw verdict rendered.

Charley Dasher, Butler's manager, has had Al Belmont, a former high-stepper among the feathers, under the training of his charge for his bout tomorrow night. It is Belmont's claim Butler will be in the pink of trim and register an emphatic victory over his old rival.

Leo P. Flynt, Mack's handler, also sends word from New York that his boy will be cherry ripe, and adds he will be the worst disappointed man in the building if Mack doesn't beat Butler so far that whoever it is who referees cannot do otherwise but nominate him the victor.

If the two boys are right—and there's every thing to indicate they will be trained to the dear old, stereotyped minute—the fans are assured one corking good little scrap.

Boston's new club, the Commercial A. C., makes its bow Friday night, throwing Howard McRae of Cambridge and Harry Carboni of Brockton, two of the best boxers in all New England and two of the best prospects in the featherweight division for naughty bouts.

The club's quarters are at No. 7 Green street, in the West End. It has opened a downtown office at No. 28 Bromfield street, where, from 10 a. m. until 5 p. m. daily members may pay their assessments. After that hour the club will be opened every night in the week, with the secretary or one of his assistants always on hand.

"Billy" Casey, the former amateur star, makes his bow as a professional at the Commercial A. C.'s maiden show. His opponent will be Joe Camp, a tough, awkward battler. Joe Connolly of Charlestown and "Ty" Gardner of the South End and Johnny Sullivan of the North End and Tommy Fox of Charlestown will clash in the other numbers.

At Belmont will miss Walter Butler's battle with Frankie Mack tomorrow night. That's because he has been substituted by the Twentieth Century A. C. of Pittsfield to take Young Britt's place against Willie Jackson of New York. Belmont dons his himself back in trim and was glad to get the date. The weight is announced as 124 pounds at 8 o'clock.

Freddie Yelle of Taunton, who has not been very active of late, is carded to clash with Harry Kantrowitz of Paris, Me., a newcomer in these parts, but a boy who is no "slouch," at Thornton, R. I., tonight. If Dempsey doesn't suffer stage fright Yelle will have to go on high in order to be heard.

Terry Martin, the Providence bantamweight, makes his debut under Joe McCarthy's management on Monday night. Terry's opponent will be Pat Moriarty of Philadelphia. Also on the card, Monday night, will be a battle or two from the top, and if Martin goes over as he ought to he should get a return bout in Boston by either the Armory A. A. or Commercial A. C.

Another go Wednesday night nearby will also have two lads bantams peeling away at each other. The boys are Al Shubert, the New Bedford Bearcat, and Frankie Brown of Al Lippe's stable, and the place is Manchester, N. H.

Saylor to Make N. Y. Bow Friday

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, May 8.—Milburn Saylor, the Indianapolis lightweight, who jumped into prominence by knocking out Leach Cross late in the Winter, makes his first appearance here Friday night in a ten-round bout with Young Brown.

SAYLOR has been guaranteed $2,500 for his end. In another ten-round bout Vic Moran, the New Orleans lightweight, will go against Phil Bloom.

LARRY HANDON, the Danish lightweight, boxes "Sailor Joe" Kelly at the Olympic Club tonight.

IN Brooklyn "Buddy" Faulkes, the crack New England colored battler, will meet "Battling" Chuck "Dutch" Brandt and Abe Friedman also hook up across the bridge.

'Ping' Bodie Wants to Re-enter Show

SAN FRANCISCO, May 8.—"Ping" Bodie wants to go back to the big show, not because of any desire to leave his old home town, but just to show up Jimmy Callahan, whom Ping claims rode him off the White Sox team.

"Sure, I'm satisfied—tickled right here," says Bodie. "But I hope that I'm sold or traded just so I can hang another laugh on Callahan.

"I gave it to him last Fall when the Yankees offered me a job. I turned it down because they would not pay me as much money as I was making here."

ONLY FOUR PASSES ISSUED BY WALTER

In six games, working 55 innings, Walter Johnson, the Washington team's noted right-hander, has given free transportation but once. That was in the contest with the Yankees April 20, when he walked four batters. Since then Johnson has worked full games against the Yankees, Red Sox and Athletics without passing a single batter. He has struck out 36 men, and won all his games, save his massacre at Fenway Park, April 17.

HANS LOBERT IS ON MEND.

Philadelphia, May 8.—Hans Lobert, the Giants' crippled third baseman, has thrown away his cane and plans working out daily with the Athletics commencing today or tomorrow. Lobert figures he will be able to get back in the game inside of ten days, or two weeks at the outside.

Iron Mask, King of Sprinters, Passes Away

By International News Service.

Lexington, Ky., May 8.—Iron Mask, eight years old, one of the most famous sprinters of all times on the American turf, died here last night of double pneumonia. He was by Disguise-Royal Rose and was bred at Castleton Farm and owned by the late James R. Keene.

In 1913 Iron Mask set the world's record for six furlongs at 1:10 3-5 and reduced that mark to 1:09 3-5 at Juarez the following Winter. At Juarez he also set a new American record for five and one-half furlongs, 1:02 3-5.

Boston People, Attention! I just landed thirteen pieces of fine grade Mystic Worsteds, this season's styles, absolutely all worsteds and all wool, Dublin twisted both ways. There isn't a tailor or clothier in Boston who advertises Mystic Worsteds under $35.00. I got these goods off price and had the pick of a great range of styles.

Original Ticket, taken from the piece

I want every customer of mine in Boston who has had the pleasure of buying a suit in my Boston store to come in and look at these woolens. I won't be able to sell them to you again under $35.00, as far as my personal view of the woolen market allows me to see, and I want you, Mr. Reader, whether you have been a customer or not, to come in and look at these goods and get samples to compare.

United States Worsted Company's 12 to 13 oz. Blue Serge, guaranteed all wool and guaranteed for color. No tailor advertises this particular number under $35.00. My price, three-piece suit to order, including an extra pair of trousers of the same goods

The Struggles of a Wife

Myra Is Worried About Paying the Family Bills Till She Gets a Check.

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water.

CHAPTER XXX.

(Copyright, 1912, by Star Company.)

MYRA WEBB did not cast any shadow on Grace Martin's satisfaction in her successful dinner party by telling her that no word had come from the Imperial Magazine office about the story on which so much depended.

Yet the mother knew that if it was not sold she would have to use the next fortnight's housekeeping allowance to pay for the expenses of the dinner party.

She would have to do it in some way, but if a check came for her from the magazine she would have money enough to replace the housekeeping allowance and to pay for numerous other things. If it did not come—but she would not let herself consider this possibility.

At least, in the devotion she felt from her mind. It is possible to banish such reflections when one is up and about one's work. But in night there is times to be a fearful period of refreshing fear that will not control one's thoughts.

So Myra Webb would wake in the middle of the night with a sense of impending trouble. She would remember suddenly that she had wantonly spent money that did not belong to her. And for what? For a dinner party that was really beyond their means!

She tried to comfort herself by reflecting on how dream had enjoyed it how Horace had looked brighter than usual, for music always brought out the best in him.

If she had been extravagant through unselfish motives, need she reproach herself? Ought she not rather to congratulate herself on having given her husband such a happy evening?

THE BILLS WORRY HER

But self-congratulation in the settle restlessness bills she would ponder miserably. She was obliged to hire a woman to come in and help Lizzie serve the dinner and wash the dishes.

Of course, this assistant had been paid before the word dinner on night; it was one of the items of expense which was not absolutely necessary. Could they not, should they have been left undone? The next day when Myra herself could not help feeling that the dinner party was "Trivialities" Polly thought "yes, they were. Yet the woman who had gone through such a performance could not smile at them. It is as if one lost all sense of discrimination in the silent midnight watches.

"If I could only know I had sold my story," Myra would sigh.

And then one afternoon she was summoned to the telephone.

"Mr. Martin wants to speak to you," said Perry Martin's stenographer.

"Good morning, Mrs. Webb, hope the man's misery, answered. "I have been away and only got back yesterday. That's the reason I have not let you know about the story until now."

Myra's knees trembled under her. She felt as if she must demand shrilly what his verdict was. In another minute she would know the worst or the best.

"Well," she said, "what do you think of it?"

"It is all right. Good stuff. I like it even better than your first."

"I am glad." How cool her voice sounded, yet she wanted to exclaim with joy; wanted to clasp her hands in relief.

BUTTE PAY STILL

"A check will go to you next week," the editor was saying.

"You how much?" Could it be she, Myra Webb, who was asking this bold question?

Mr. Martin laughed lightly. "I was wondering if you appreciated that this last story is a little longer than the first, and since it is even better I think we might add twenty-five dollars to your check."

"Yes, well." Myra acknowledged the information with admirably feigned indifference.

So cool did she act her part that the editor added: "I am taking it for granted that check is satisfactory to you, Mrs. Webb. If not, please tell me so frankly and I will see what we can do."

"Oh, yes," Myra replied. "That will be quite satisfactory, thank you."

She hung off and dropping into a chair, buried her face in her hands and burst into sobs. She was about to walk Lizzie's afternoon out.

"Thank God!" she sobbed. "Oh, thank God!"

She let herself cry until her excitement had spent itself. She had sold her story for one hundred and twenty-five dollars. How could she know what she owned? She could give Grace something for a new dress! She could perhaps buy herself a new blouse.

She arose suddenly as the door bell and Grace entered.

GRACE DOES NOT UNDERSTAND.

"What's the matter?" the girl immediately startled at the sight of her friend's red and swollen eyes.

"Nothing," Myra tried to smile, but failed miserably. "I have sold my story," she added triumphantly, "for more than I have gotten for any piece of writing yet."

"Why," Grace looked at her a moment and then broke into a laugh, "I do believe you are the strangest creature, mother. You have sold a story and right here you are about it as if you hated to part with it."

Myra laughed hysterically. "I am glad you are pleased," I was crying because I was so glad and so relieved."

Grace stood for head. "That's an unusual method of expressing happiness, mother. I don't think I understand it, but I am glad you sold the story for a good price!" Grace added. "I am glad on father's account, too; for really, when he enjoys company as much as he does, I do think you ought to entertain more—I mean, invite his friends here oftener—and maybe, of course, only once a week, you can afford it. You know I don't know much about such things."

I know, dear," Myra agreed. "Of course you are not selfish."

To Be Continued.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

STUDY THE BOY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My intended husband is one and I have all known for the same family for four months. We have known each other all our lives.

Shortly after our engagement the son, a man of twenty, told me of his love for me, and was then, and is now, apparently unhappy.

I recently forbade the son his usual goodby kiss and he was so unhappy he could not eat. I also notice an inclination of late for the father to take the son's side whenever a point arises. Both father and son are careless in self to me. I am thirty-six, he is forty-three, and each loves the other the highest type of love.

Is there any chance for happiness, would I be more unhappy without him than with him?

SINCE you are a nurse you ought to have some understanding of this boy's nature. Of course a lad of twenty can't be expected to have a man almost twice his age, and he can easily imagine he is when he is confronted by a choice between a good woman's love. If you are capable of treating this boy as a mother and winning his respect and admiration through an unselfish attempt to understand him and sympathize in his father's love for him your marriage will be happy. But if you are going to be so selfish as to consider yourself first you are likely to wreck the three lives. I cannot understand that a woman of your profession has learned so little of human nature.

SEND HIM A CARD

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl. I had been corresponding with a young man for a number of months, but recently we became estranged. Would it be improper, under the circumstances, for me to send him a birthday card?

A. P. W.

M. Dear A. P. W.—You are asking me, in effect, if you should make the first advances in what is evidently a spat between two who were good friends. Well, my dear, one seldom suffers from being a little willing to go half-way, or a little bit more, if desirable. Sometimes, depends, of course, upon the nature of the quarrel. There are one of these dreadfully self-satisfied, sure-and-certain chaps, who feel that everyone should give in to them; it might be for the benefit of his nature if you should remain indifferent and not begin the overtures. But, on the other hand, if he is what the boys call "a regular fellow," if he is kind-hearted and forgiving only happens to be somewhat angry or hurt by your last misunderstanding, why you can forget about without loss of self-respect—that you are not a hard-hearted creature. In short, send him a card if it will not make him unbearably conceited.

Fascinating Fashions for Milady

Never Were Styles More Appealing to Women Who Love Dainty Fluffiness

Very appealing to the bride is a sleeveless and low-necked wedding gown, entirely of tulle except for silver lace on bodice and a narrow white satin girdle. The tulle veil is protected from the carpet by a rounded piece of satin and is caught here and there with white blossoms.

Many smart blouses show the Japanese tendency at the neck line, a straight upstanding piece. In one blouse this piece is fashioned of Irish lace, as are the cuffs. The purple wenchou hat at the left shows a novel-shaped crown, which slants back. In the centre is a hat of pale pink Milan, covered with Georgette crepe and a band of pink ribbon laced through pleats and tying in bow at side.

Curious Kissing Crazes

"SOMEWHERE in France" the other day an exceedingly comely damsel insisted on fervently kissing a British "Tommy" who had performed a very heroic deed.

She saluted him at least a dozen times, and, indeed, only desisted when pushed away by another admiring fair one hurrying to show her appreciation in the same sweet way.

At least a score of others followed suit, and goodness only knows when it would all have ended had not the gallant soldier sought refuge in flight. He afterwards remarked that he would rather face all the Germans in France and Belgium than go through such an ordeal again.

It will be remembered that when Lieutenant Hobson of Merrimac fame performed his heroic exploit, thousands of American girls and women lined up to be kissed by him. At Kansas City upwards of 400 received his coveted salutation, and at Topeka more than 500 awaited him at the railway station, eager to be kissed.

Amidst exclamations of "Isn't he sweet!" and "He's just too lovely for anything!" Hobson made his appearance, and kissed away until his train was ready to resume its journey. Similar scenes were enacted in other towns, and it is highly probable that the hero of the Merrimac kissed more women than any other man in the world.

When Osborn W. Dignam, one of the crew of the Merrimac, returned to his home at Stuart, Indiana, there was a crowd of girls lined up at the railway station ready and anxious to kiss him.

He neither not unnaturally wished to give the first salutation, and, with the help of some male sympathizers, she succeeded. By a ruse the eager damsels were balked of their prey for the time being, the young fellow being escorted to his home before one of them could snatch a kiss from him. But the girls were not to be denied, and later on all had their chance at his mother's house, of which none failed to avail herself.

KISSING-BEE IN COURT

There was a kissing-bee in the police-court of Jersey City. A colored pastor was arraigned on a charge of obtaining a sum of money by false pretenses and all the female members of his flock attended the proceedings.

When the charge was dismissed, these interested spectators were transported with delight. With one accord they fell on their disliberated pastor's neck and kissed him. After he had been well-nigh smothered in osculatory embraces, the excited women turned their attention to the discomfited deacons of the church, who were treated to the same marks of affection.

Then they sought to similarly reward the counsel for the defence, but the lawyer incontinently fled. The magistrate then came in for attention, which he avoided by dodging behind his desk. After a turn of kissing each other, the women again fell upon their pastor, and "smacked" away until it became necessary to clear the court-room. The hugging and kissing only ceased when the party reached the street.

On the occasion of the return from South Africa of the City Imperial Volunteers, quite a kissing carnival took place in London. Crowds of young girls and apprentices pushed their way through the streets, kissing every woman and girl within reach.

Every unattended lady was thus rudely assailed, and in some cases had to bear the added indignity of being passed on from one kisser to another. Some lively scenes took place, particularly when one unescorted damsel, who had been bodily swept into a side street, called out lustily for rescue from a group of odious would-be kissers.

A Liverpool man pleaded the war as his excuse for contracting the kissing fever. Taking his stand at the entrance to Lime street station, he was seen to place his arm around the waists of several ladies and kiss them as they passed. The screams of the indignant fair ones attracted the attention of a policeman, who took the promiscuous kisser into custody.

FINED JUST THE SAME

Before the magistrate he essayed to excuse his conduct on the ground of excess of joy at the return of his son from the war. But this did not prevent the infliction of a fine of forty shillings, a fairly substantial price to pay for two or three kisses taken without leave.

Not long since a young man who was afflicted with the kissing mania entered a street car in New York. To their amazement, he at once started to kiss all the women passengers, and had nearly gone the round of them before they recovered their presence of mind.

One, however, vigorously slapped the kisser's face, whereon he jumped from the car, sustaining a nasty fall. Picking himself up, he made his way to the footwalk and imprinted a kiss on the face of the first woman he met.

A policeman then took him in hand, from whom he broke away and kissed another fair passer-by. When again secured he was on the point of raining a third, and was only overcome after a desperate struggle. He turned out to be a kissing maniac.

Just before the outbreak of the war a young Frenchman created a sensation in the streets of Brussels by kissing every member of the opposite sex whom she met. Her conduct did not commend itself to one of the kinds, who complained to a policeman.

On his attempting to arrest her, she actually tried to kiss him, as well as the inspector on duty at the police station to which she was forthwith escorted. A doctor testified that the fair prisoner was suffering from mental derangement on the problem of kissing, which saved her from being punished for taking osculatory exercise on unwilling subjects.

Tabloid Tales

WHAT, Mother, is meant by a "postgraduate course?"

The love affairs, Little One, of a widow.

Who, Mother, is the Reformer?

He is the man, My Child, who demands that others be what he is not.

Why is it, Mother, that the man who groaned over little troubles becomes patient when he has married?

Because, Child, he has learned that if he complains because his head or his feet hurt him, he will hear from his wife: "You ought to know what it means to be the mother of a family."

Why, Mother, does the man take his wife's picture with him wherever he goes? Is it a proof of Great Love?

No, Dear; it is only a proof of Great Sagacity. When a man takes his wife's picture with him on his trips, she is there times as long in discovering that he doesn't take her as she would be in making the discovery if he left her resting at home. There are some women so satisfied with having their photographs in their husband's grips they never realize they are left behind.

Do women, Mother, have as great influence over their husbands as is claimed?

No woman, My Dear, can claim she has great influence over her husband unless she can get him to go out to spend the evening after he has put on his slippers. After a man has his shoes off at night, his wife's influence over him weakens by 45 per cent., if she had ever had any in the beginning, which is doubtful.

What, Dearest Mother, is the difference between Underwear and Lingerie?

Underwear, Little One, covers the wearer up. Lingerie simply throws a shadow over her.

What, Mother Mine, would be the most interesting news that could come from those who have Gone Before?

I would like to know, My Child, all of us would like to know, if those who have Gone Before were ever able to do anything with the Technicality when before the recording angel.

Why, mother, do you say no woman should go to a man with her troubles?

My daughter, heed this carefully. When a woman who has had trouble with one man tells it to another she is on her way to accumulate a lot of new ones.

The Mystery of Odors

A Young Woman's Notion That She Smelled Apple Butter by Telephone—and Some Reflections.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

HERE is a curious letter, leading to interesting reflections:

"Is it possible for odors to travel over telephone wires? The other day I was cooking 'apple butter,' which has a rather strong odor. After it had been cooking for some time a friend called me up, and after a few minutes' conversation she said: 'What are you cooking that smells so good?' I asked her if she really could smell it and she said she could. We are all very much puzzled about it.—Miss A. H., Chicago."

I am satisfied of the sincerity of the writer and of her intelligence. The first impulse is to assume that imagination, awakened by some accidental suggestion or coincidence, was at the basis of the phenomenon. According to all scientific lights, that seems to be the only explanation.

And yet science is a very fragmentary thing, and some of its most extraordinary discoveries have grown out of observations which were at first rejected as illusory or absurd. Odors and the sense of smell which enables us to perceive them are very strange phenomena.

It is assumed that odors are due to the emanation of volatile particles from the substances that give rise to them. But these supposed particles are so minute that they cannot be seen with microscopes, and cannot be felt except by the nerves associated with the sense of smell.

"A few centigrams of musk placed on a sensitive scale," says Atkinson's treatise on perfumes, "can for years fill a large hall with their characteristic odor without showing an appreciable loss of weight, and still particles must separate from the musk and become evenly diffused through the air of the hall because the odor is perceptible through every part of it."

MAY BE VIBRATORY

One cannot help wondering whether it may not be a vibratory radiation of some kind, instead of a volatile emanation, that affects the nerves of smell, as rays of light affect those of vision. And if that be the real basis of odor, then a relationship with electricity is at once established, and the sense of smell falls into accord with other senses, such as sight and hearing, which act through vibratory impulses. There is no reason why any kind of vibration might not be transformed and reproduced on the telephonic principle.

I am not assuming that the young lady in Chicago has made an important scientific discovery, but that the odor of her "apple-butter" really traveled by telephone. I wish only to point out the fact that science may occasionally be too dogmatic in rejecting the results of observations which it cannot explain by its already established "laws." There is always something more to be found out.

The idea that odor may be a vibratory phenomenon underlies the theory of Piesse that perfumes are susceptible of being arranged on a harmonic scale, having the compass of a piano, and that different scents when treated as tones, may be combined into chords, like musical sounds. By mixing aromatic substances in accordance with his assumed principle of odoriferous harmony Piesse thought that he could demonstrate the correctness of his views.

But it would require an education of the sense of smell to enable most persons to perceive harmony of that kind.

JUST A BIG INFANT

And yet just as a bed of flowers affects us differently according to the arrangement of its colors, so might not a skillful selection of blossoms with regard to their several odors produce a pleasing, or unpleasing, effect upon the sense of smell?

The fact is that the human race is just a big infant, and has not yet half learned the use of the powers of its own senses. We allow ourselves to be deceived by those senses all the time. We have undoubtedly got senses which are almost unrecognized, for intimations of their existence sometimes come to us in strange and startling ways, but like babies we shrink away, afraid of the novelty of the stuff we pay no attention.

There is a whole world of discovery waiting for its Columbus in this very field of odors. We have hardly touched its outskirts. We are still in the stage of the mere wonder about it. Take the effect of various scents and perfumes upon the nerves and through the nerves upon the brain. Why do some extremely sensitive foods lose their taste if the organ of smell is obstructed?

How do blind persons recognize individuals—by their particular odor? How does the dog follow a special scent through a labyrinth of other odors? The fact that water will wash away a trail seems to favor the theory that odor is due to an emanation of material particles, but perfume will penetrate fine substances, or turns them away, as transparent substances like glass do the rays of light.

Just as certain musical sounds awaken in us the most profound mental emotions, some stirring him to intense activity and some lulling him into a dreaming mood, of giving wings to his imagination, so particular odors will act upon the mind and bring their goods and their visions.

In Our Wonderful World

JUST as sleep is a natural phenomenon of life, so dreams are a natural phenomenon of sleep. The medical man assures us that the longest dream we ever have—even the dream that seems to carry us through several days—actually occupies no more than a single second.

Some authorities maintain that if any part of our dreams were to last longer than a single second we should die. Other authorities are convinced that we do not sleep all the sleep tea Shakespeare has expressed it) "twixt sleep and waking."

It is also argued that dreams are nothing but disordered ideas and images passing through the drowsy mind, and being no more than extraordinary variations of things that we have thought, or read in our waking moments, they can have no possible association with our future. But, on the other hand, dreams have been credited with prophetic meanings since the days when the world was young; and dreambooks are still published and purchased and consulted by the million.

The ingenious tricks apies of all armies have devised in this war would fill a volume.

Under the plea for the spy to establish himself inside the belfry of the clock hands, of course, all sorts of signals is agreed upon, and the enemy retiliery observing officer knows at a glance just where his shells are falling.

A good story is told of a spy-posed Austrian infantryman, who came along driving a flock of geese. Unaware that he was being watched, he came to a standstill just in front of a concealed battery of guns. For some time he remained there, and then passed on his way, presumably to dine off one of the fat birds in his flock. But when, shortly after he had gone on his way, the German guns opened fire on that very spot, killing many French gunners and putting some of the guns out of action, suspicion was aroused. The infantryman was followed and caught; later he proved to be a spy in the enemy's pay, and he had arranged to stop just in front of that concealed battery. His end was swift.

Spiders, according to common superstition, are always omens of good fortune and money, therefore to kill them provokes wrath and invites disaster. Superstitious people will tell that the bride who finds a spider in the folds of her wedding gown may look forward to a married life of great prosperity and that if by any chance you are sitting in a room with other people and a spider singles you out from the rest and weaves its way towards you it means that a heap sum of money will be yours at some future period. The belief that the appearance of the little red spider foretells the receipt of money may have originated in the belief held by Cornish miners that the spiders scent out gold, and that their presence will always show where gold may be found.

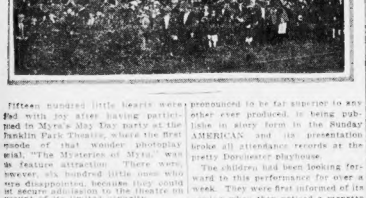
1,500 Children See 'Myra' Movie May Party Packs House

THE flying balloon sign over the Franklin Park Theatre that announces the great moving picture serial, and below a glimpse of the great throng that was unable to find room in the theatre at "Myra's May Day Party."



fifteen hundred little hearts were glad with joy after having partaken of the May Day party given at the Franklin Park Theatre, where the first episode of that wonder photoplay serial, "The Mysteries of Myra," is a feature attraction. There were, however, six hundred little ones who were disappointed, because they failed to secure admission to the theatre on account of the overflowing crowd.

Long before the hour set for the performance to start, the theatre was packed to its uttermost and there filled the eyes of the little ones who were late when the unsolved riddle problem of the door informed them that they could not get in.

GIFTS FOR CHILDREN.

This film serial, which entitles have pronounced to be far superior to any of its predecessors, is now being published in story form in the Sunday AMERICAN and its presentation broke all attendance records at the pretty Franklin Park theatre.

The children had been looking forward to this performance for over a week. They were first informed of its coming when they noticed a monster balloon floating over the roof of the theatre a week ago. It was illuminated with powerful arc lights at night and gave the appearance of a monster Zeppelin as it soared in the air.

Manager Frank D. Stanton, who was in charge of the Myra party, presented each of the big serial's patrons with a toy balloon as a souvenir of the memorable event.

HAVE PICTURES TAKEN.

The kiddies shrieked with joy when Richard Estabrook, in the role of Dr. Payson Algen, the hero, braved arrest in order that he might save that dainty screen star, Miss Jean Southern, who portrays Myra Maynard, from death at the hands of the Black Order, who sought her fortune.

The pitiful sights of the little ones were audible when it appeared as though Myra was fated to die during the absence of her volunteer protector.

However, when Dr. Algen succeeded in foiling their criminal designs and saved Myra in the secret cellar of her home, cheers were to be heard from every voice and all left the theatre contented and happy. A number of the little ones were lined up in front of the house after the performance and were photographed with Manager Stanton. They they scampered home full of joy and determined to attend next Saturday's matinee to learn whether Alden will get the Black Order in its next attempt to send Myra into eternity.

can only be reached by systematic treatment. It is true that the pains may be relieved by opiates, but the poisonous acids may be neutralized for the time being, but they will return with only temporary relief, and no one can even hope to permanently cure so soon as the effect of the narcotic wears away the sufferer is worse than the same condition as before.

"Stomach trouble I cured with Plant Juice, which is a purely herbal preparation that acts directly on the liver, stomach, liver and kidneys, modern life requires a tonic made from the best medicinal plants, and is absolutely free of mineral drugs, alcohol, opium or other pernicious poisons. Since its introduction I have been deluged with letters expressing gratitude to thank me for what Plant Juice has done for them. The following signed statement was made by Mr. Alfred J. Suttail, who lives at 1 Catawba street and is employed by one of the largest dressing firms in this city. He said:

"For years I had suffered with indigestion and dyspepsia, and everything I ate would ferment in my stomach and cause gas to form then I was all bloated up and had pain all over my body. Words cannot describe my sufferings. I was down to 120 pounds and lost 10 pounds in weight. I felt so tired and discouraged that I thought I would have to give up my work altogether and if I had not decided to take Plant Juice would have done so. Since I have taken three bottles of Plant Juice it has put me on my feet again; my stomach is in good condition. I sleep well and have no more aches or pains. When I get up in the morning I feel refreshed and ready for my day's work. Plant Juice has certainly done wonders for me and I am recommending it to everyone."—Advertisement.

PUBLIC SERVICE

Monday, May 8, 1916

An Honest Public Service Commission Is the Stockholders' Best Friend

THOSE citizens of Massachusetts who ought to be most interested to stop the pending conspiracy to destroy the Public Service Commission by reorganizing it in the name of economy are those who have stock in the public service corporations.

If there is anything in the world which a stockholder who has put real money into a public service corporation for stocks or bonds ought to insist upon having in this State, IT IS AN HONEST AND COURAGEOUS PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION. It would seem as if any intelligent stockholder must have learned from the disasters which have overtaken the Bay State Street Railway, the New Haven, the Boston & Maine, the Rock Island, the Missouri Pacific, the San Francisco, and in fact all the railroads in the country at one time or another in their history, that they were disasters which resulted NOT from too MUCH public control, but from too LITTLE.

Had the laws of Massachusetts been obeyed by the New Haven, instead of, as now, paying NO dividends, it would be still paying the 8 per cent. which it paid in its prosperous days.

Had the laws of Massachusetts been obeyed by the Boston & Maine, the Boston & Maine would not be in its present miserable condition and would never have been on the verge of bankruptcy, paying no dividends and having no credit.

If the old railroad board had possessed the power of the present commission, or if it had possessed any man with the independence and courage of the present commission, even with its old powers, the Boston & Maine would be still paying the 6 and 7 per cent. which it paid for seventy-three years, WITHOUT A SINGLE BREAK FROM ITS VERY FORMATION until the consequences of its recent lawlessness began to overtake it. It would be still paying the liberal dividends which it paid during the most distressful, direful periods of our American history, during the Civil War, during the panic of '73 and Black Friday and during the panic of '93, the worst epochs in the career of the Republic.

How is it possible for an intelligent stockholder not to understand that public regulation, fearless and firm and independent, is the only protection which he has for his investments? Will he never awaken to the fact that his danger lies IN THE SPECULATION AND DISHONESTY AND INCOMPETENCE OF THE MEN WHO CONTROL and manage these corporations under orders from Wall Street and whose eyes are on the STOCK TICKER and not on the LEGITIMATE BUSINESS of their corporations?

If the men who manage these corporations would always manage them economically and honestly, there NEVER would be any fear from an investigation. There is no disposition on the part of the public to deny a corporation an honest return upon its investment. The public is suspicious of these corporations, not because they are corporations, but because they have been so outrageously and dishonestly mismanaged to the public injury, and because they have interfered in politics and helped to corrupt and to lower the tone of public life in this country.

Any man or woman in Masachusetts who has invested in a Massachusetts public service corporation ought to know that the scheme to destroy the Public Service Commission is a scheme to deprive them of the protection which they need against dishonest, incompetent, speculative management, and further Wall Street raids on their property.

Mr. Bauer Points the Finger of Truth

He Warns Against the Attempted Destruction of the Public Service Commission in the Midst of the Six-Cent Fare Hearing

THE AMERICAN calls attention to the following passage in the letter which Mr. Ralph S. Bauer, president of the Lynn Board of Trade and former president of the Associated Boards of Trade in Essex County, addressed to Chairman Warner of the House Ways and Means Committee of the Legislature, protesting against the present corporation attempt to destroy the Public Service Commission:

> "We deem it most important that all the interests involved be permitted to finish this case before the present Public Service Commission, and, we further believe, that their judgment on this very important and far reaching case should not be put in jeopardy by the consciousness that they as a body are to be exterminated.
> "No human tribunal can render fair judgment when their state of mind is pulsating with their own death throes, and there can be no fair reason for any Legislature to create conditions of this nature, when a case is on trial, that has so vital a bearing on the daily life of eighty communities in this Commonwealth."

The AMERICAN on a previous occasion called attention to the debt of which the people of Massachusetts and of those cities and towns served by the Bay State Street Railway owe to Mr. Bauer.

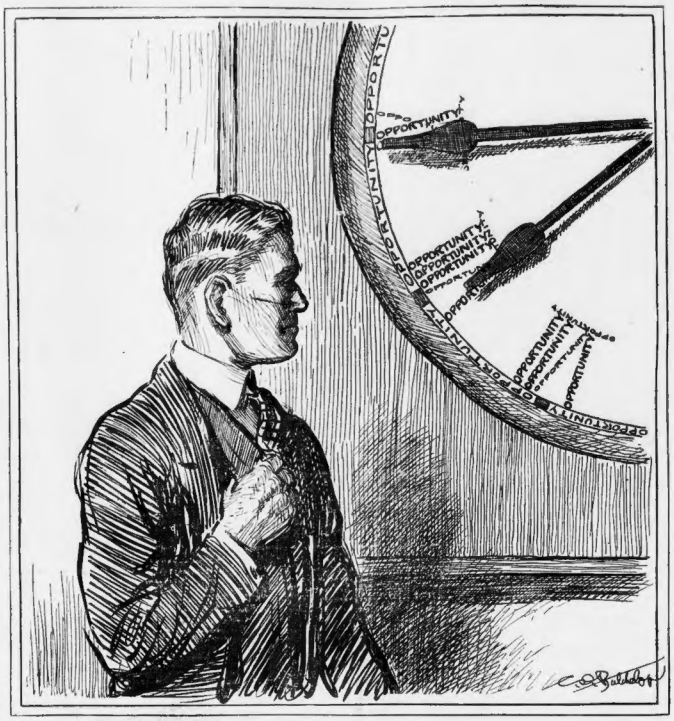
Mr. Bauer organized the opposition to the demand for a six-cent fare by the Bay State Street Railway and is chairman of the Legislative Committee of that opposition. He has largely financed that opposition out of his own pocket and has given almost all his time to a work, the remuneration of which can only be public approval.

Therefore, it is of great consequence and interest to the people of the Bay State Street Railway territory to learn what Mr. Bauer has to say concerning the attempt of the public service corporations in this State to destroy the present Public Service Commission before which, as a court, the trial of the six-cent fare question is now proceeding. That case is already "full high advanced" before the commission and under the painstaking, thorough and loyal handling of the public's side of the question by City Solicitor Wadleigh of Lynn, the public has every right to expect a victory, if things take their normal course. Now comes, however, the determined attempt of the allied corporations to destroy the commission. These corporations were not accustomed in the past to have any doubt as to the result of their demands on the old Railroad Commission. They do not like the present situation. They are accustomed to play the game with loaded dice and marked cards. They do not like to play any other way. They do not like to toss the coin unless it is "heads I win and tails you lose."

The Telephone Company knows that it cannot much longer postpone an investigation of its rates and service and it knows that such an investigation would mean a large saving to those who use telephones in this State. Therefore this company is determined that there shall not be a THOROUGH and HONEST investigation. The recent investigation in New York resulted in a saving of five millions of dollars to the New York users of telephones alone. They want no repetition of that kind of an investigation in Massachusetts. They would like to create a new HAND-PICKED commission of smug, respectable little gentlemen who would make a very "proper" inquiry and slap the telephone company gently on the wrist, perhaps.

So the Bay State and the other public service corporations of this State want a commission like the old Railroad Commission, under which were committed all the crimes and misdemeanors of the New Haven Railroad, the Boston & Maine and the street railways, which have destroyed their credit, RUINED hundreds of stockholders, robbed thousands more, and injured beyond calculation thousands of business men who relied upon these roads to serve them in their competition with other firms of the West and South.

BE READY FOR THE HOUR



More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

The English Sparrow

HE has no bluebird's beauty; he has no robin's lay,
He chatters from the peep of dawn until the close of day.
He quarrels about his family; he quarrels about his meals.
A host of disputatious pals is always at his heels.
And yet he's always prosperous, and if you asked him why.
I rather fancy he would make the following reply:
"A bird that hasn't any looks and hasn't any song
Has got to be a nuisance, or he'd never get along."

ALTHOUGH he never makes a friend, he doesn't seem to care.
Upon his small and mean concerns he hurries here and there:
A ruffled-feathered braggart—a ball of false pretence,
Whose attitude is ever one of purposeless offence.
And yet his loudly chattering tribe increases day by day,
And if you asked him to explain I sort of think he'd say:
"You know, I've found it's well worth while to give the world no rest;
If one has no good qualities, it pays to be a pest."

AND so, dear friends, let's all join hands and raucously rejoice;
We may not have R. Kipling's pen, or E. Caruso's voice;
We may not act like Beerbohm Tree nor look like Billie Burke,
Or have the talent old John D. has always had for work;
Our feet may sullenly refuse to wave about like tassels
And thus debar us from such fame as Mr. Vernon Castle's.
But if we haply lack the gifts with which to ring the bell,
Aggressive mediocrity will serve us just as well.

Ban on Poor Son-in-Law a Mistake

Rich Men Often Commit Grave Error in Repulsing All but Well-to-Do Suitors for Their Daughters' Hands, Dorothy Dix Asserts

By Dorothy Dix

PROBABLY the most unpleasant quarter of an hour that a man ever spends is that in which he faces a cold and unromantic father and asks him for his daughter's hand in marriage. Of course, if there are extenuating circumstances in the way of money or position—if he can offer the girl a country place and automobiles—the situation is robbed of much of its terrors, and the parental blessing is a foregone conclusion.

If, however, he is an impecunious youth with nothing to give his wife but the love of his heart, and the work of his hands, he would face a gatling gun with less trepidation than the old man's stern inquiry: "Young man, can you support my daughter in the style in which she has been accustomed to live?"

Of course, a father is doing no more than his duty, and is strictly within his rights, when he tries to protect his daughter from grinding poverty, but when he goes further than that and objects to a worthy man simply because he can't offer a girl all the luxuries to which she has been accustomed he is going too far.

He is demanding that the young man start in where he is leaving off. It has taken him many years of hard work to be able to give his family the luxury in which they now live, and it is absurd to expect any young man to have achieved that much success.

Hasn't Had Time to Make It for Himself

If the young man has a bank account to match the girl's father's, he is bound to have inherited it. He hasn't had time to make it for himself. Looking at the matter from a business point of view, and with reference to the girl's bread and butter, it is a strange thing that it doesn't oftener strike fathers that the young man who has successfully held the same place in an office or a store for four or five years and saved up a thousand or two dollars while "clerking it" is a thousand times better match for any girl than the youth who never earned a dollar in his life, who knows neither how to make money nor to save it, and whose one star performance in life consists in having been born the son of a rich man.

Only too often, however, the well-to-do man turns a cold and unfriendly eye on the suitor for his daughter who tells him that he has nothing but a good situation with a chance of doing better. Father sternly remarks that when HE married he was able to support his wife in the style in which she had been accustomed to live.

He forgets that he took his bride to a cottage or a humble flat, while he expects his son-in-law to install his daughter in a fine mansion. He ignores the fact that his wife in their early days did her own cooking and made her own frocks, while he demands that his daughter's husband shall provide her with a retinue of servants and millinery from Paris.

Whether or No She Will Be Happy Depends on Girl

Of course, in trying to keep his daughter from marrying a poor man, the father truly says that he has nothing but her happiness at heart. He believes that she will be perfectly miserable living in less style, with fewer clothes, and plainer surroundings than those to which she is accustomed.

That depends on the girl.

If she is the kind of a girl whose heart is stuffed with chiffons and whose soul will go to Paris when she dies, she will never be indiscreet enough to fall in love with a man who isn't strictly eligible from a monetary point of view. She is just as capable of loving a man without a nose as one without a big bank account.

But the girl whose true heart beats just as faithfully and warmly under velvet as it would under homespun, whose eyes, unblinded by wealth and fashion, see the man and not the position, and who is willing to exchange a little of the tinsel of society for the fine gold of an honest love, knows what she is about when she picks out her own particular Jack and refers him to Papa.

And Papa makes the mistake of his life when he refuses his blessing for no better reason than that the young man can't support the girl in the style in which she is accustomed to live.

There is, also, this other point of view, that if the girl's father has raised her with such luxurious tastes that she cannot be happy on the income that an ordinarily successful man can offer her, it is nothing but common fairness for her fond and foolish parent to provide her with a dowry that will offset her demand for frills.

That is one way around the difficulty, and certainly it is quite as just as to expect the young man to be able to humor the unreasonable extravagance and wastefulness in which the daughters of so many rich parents are reared.

As it is, the average worthy young man fights shy of the rich girl. The idea of breaking into a family in which he is not desired because he is poor is not attractive. Neither is it alluring to feel that his wife is looked upon as a martyr for having married him.

The modern father must adopt a kinder attitude, if he doesn't want to be left with a lot of old maid daughters on his hands.

The Barrier

By Jane McLean

I WANT you, Life, no matter what you bring:
If it be song, I'll raise my voice and sing;
If it be grief, I'll meekly bow the knee;
If it be sight, I'll read the stars and see;
If it be pain, I'll quaff the brimming bowl;
If it be joy, I'll give my heart and soul.
If it be death, coming with lips athirst,
I shall be ready—but I want love first.
